Stay Till Job Is Done, Plea Of La Follette To Congress

Appeal Follows Cruise Down Bay With Roosevelt.

Speaks for Self Only, He Insists

Adds Farm Legislation to Senator Barkley's 4 'Musts.'

A demand that Congress remain in session until it enacts a comprehensive legislative program was voiced by Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, upon his return last night from a week-end cruise with President Roosevelt down Chesapeake Bay.

Senator La Follette said he spoke for himself alone. His statement was regarded as significant, however, since he was a companion not only of the President but of Majority Floor Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky.

Previously, Senator Barkley had said he desired to obtain passage of four major measures prior to adjournment of the session. These were the wages and hours, court reorganization, tax loopholes and housing bills.

Adds Farm Program.

To this list La Follette added, with particular emphasis, general farm legislation.

La Follette, however, said he hopes governmental reorganization and general farm bills will be enacted at this session. Of farm legislatin he said:

"I would like to see a general farm bill passed. It cannot safely be put off until next January, as most of the crops will have been harvested by then."

La Follette added that he favors a recess rather than an adjournment, if it proves impossible to keep Congress in session until it completes what he regards as its job for the session.

The President and his party, which included the wives of the two Senators and Gov. Phil La Follette, of Wisconsin, Senator La Follette's brother, left the Presidential yacht Potomac a little after 6 p. m. last night. Barkley drove to the White House with the President but did not go into the mansion.

Barkley Statement Today.

Barkley, who made no statement last night, is expected to make known today what the Administration desires of Congress prior to adjournment.

A sub-committee of the Judiciary Committee, headed by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, is expected to report today to the full committee on the controversial judiciary procedure bill.

McCarran's group agreed Saturday on a tentative draft of the bill, including provisions for Federal intervention in lower court cases involving constitutionality of statutes, direct appeal to the Supreme Court, authority for senior circuit judges to assign judges within their circuits, and a requirement that three-judge courts rule on petitions for injunctions against enforcements of Federal statutes.

The final draft also may extend the retirement privilege recently voted for Supreme Court judges at 70 to members of the Court of Claims, the Customs Court and the Court of Patent Appeals.

Additional Judgeships.

The tentative draft contained no definite provisions for additoinal judgeships in the lower courts, but Attorney General Cummings will be asked to survey the congestion of the dockets and recommend where new positions should be created.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, said he planned to ask the committee today to add a section designed to end what he termed "racketeering" in receivership cases, probably through a limitation on the fees Federal judges may award. Borah said some members of the committee felt this to be outside the agreement under which the procedural reform bill was born and that it should not be

Lammers Clan United at Grave As 7 Auto Victims Are Buried

Family Together for Last Time at Services Beside St. Mary's Church in Maryland; Ceremony Is Brief.

Henry and Anna Lammers, father and mother, walked through the gates of a small cemetery around St. Mary's Church in Laurel, Md., yesterday afternoon, and around a flower-laden spot gathered the sons, daughters and grandchildren of their fold about them.

Its ranks divided by tragedy, a large, but closely united family, held a last meeting. And those that lived stood before the hallowed ground that was to receive those that had perished, and prayed God for courage.

Amid devout prayer the seven dead—victims of an auto burning last Thursday night on Crain Highway—were committed to eternal peace and rest.

The quiet words of a Catholic priest were lifted to Heaven—"Eternal Rest grant them, O Lord."

And then through the lips of the same parish father came the response—an utterance of Christ, the Savior—"I am the Resurrection and the Life."

The brief ceremony was over, and the surviving Lammerses, sad but unshaken, went away. They left for the farm home that until Thursday night had echoed so much laughter—the home that had been stilled with the news that death had overtaken so many of their number.

Four Lammers children, two grandchildren and a young cousin were burned to death late Thursday night as they returned from an evening of merrymaking at the Glen Burnie carnival. Their car, overturned by collision with a large freight truck, took fire, with all of the occupants pinned beneath.

Nearly 500 Present.

The elderly parents and their children were not alone in their mourning. Nearly 500 neighbors and other friends of the Lammerses stood with them around the burial grounds yesterday afternoon, and joined in the prayers for their dead.

Yesterday morning hundreds—members of St. Mary's parish—knelt at worship in the little chapel which the Lammerses visit regularly.

Mr. and Mrs. Lammers attended mass yesterday morning. The family, which for years has attended Sunday morning services in sections, because, as Mrs. Lammers pointed out, "we couldn't all leave the house at once," worshipped as usual.

And in their devotion to the ways of the Lord, the Rev. Joseph Myer found a lesson for all members of his flock.

"This is a brave family," he told

3 Convicts Flee Into Pa. Forests

Tyrone, Pa., July 25 (AP).—State motor policemen on foot and in automobiles scoured the heavily-wooded Allegheny Mountain area near Tyrone tonight in a hunt for three escaped convicts from Rockview Penitentiary.

Recovery on a nearby road of a Pennsylvania State College student's automobile which the three seized in their flight and the robbery of a woman spurred the search.

Buffalo Strike Causes Grave Food Shortage

Freight Handlers Threaten Walkout as Truce Is Sought.

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 25.—A city-wide grocery-handlers' strike threatened a serious food shortage in Buffalo tonight as the Rev. John P. Boland, State labor relations board chairman, said an immediate settlement was hopeless.

The end of a 24-hour truce, temporarily preventing a further spread of the six-day strike of 1,000 truck drivers, approached as the priest called together union officials, packing house executives and food merchants' representatives.

Closed-shop demands of both American Federation of Labor and Committee for Industrial Organization unions continued to block the movement of food supplies from 44 wholesale grocery houses.

The Rev. Boland, who recently gave up most of his Buffalo parish duties to head Gov. Lehman's new labor relations board, returned home yesterday and arranged for a resumption of conferences after a five-day deadlock.

But before entering the meetings he said the situation "is so serious that I cannot see any immediate end to the dispute."

Grocery stores reported their shelves gradually were being depleted of stock. Many city residents with automobiles were motoring to the country to buy butter, eggs and vegetables from farmers.

Coal Strikes to End.

Pittsburgh, July 25 (AP).—Patrick J. Fagan, president of District No. 5 of the United Mine Workers of America, said today that all strike-bound "captive" coal mines of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and the Bethlehem Steel Corporation probably would resume normal operations this week.

Tacoma Stores Closed.

Tacoma, Wash., July 25 (AP).—Business executives and union leaders clashed verbally today over whether closing of Tacoma's largest department stores is a strike or a lockout.

Officials of the International Protective Association of Retail Clerks, with 700 members in the ten stores, asserted they are on strike only at the Peoples Store, which closed Friday, but that the closing of nine others Saturday was a lockout.

3 Drown as Hosts Jam Beaches In Flight From 92-Degree Heat

Three persons were drowned yesterday, one a young Washington mother of three children, as thousands thronged the nearby Maryland beaches to escape a heat wave which shot the mercury up to 92 at 3 p. m.

The mother, Mrs. Margaret Cecelia Unkle, 701 Portland street southeast, was drowned near Selby-on-the-Bay, near Annapolis, Md., when she lost her grip on an inner tube and slipped into deep water. Unable to swim and in the water for the first time, Mrs. Uncle was carried out from shore. She slipped from the tube as she attempted to grasp the anchor chain of a yacht.

Mortimer Henderson, of Washington, owner of the craft, was standing on a pier when he heard Mrs. Unkle scream for help. He commandeered a rowboat, but was unable to reach her in time.

William Buck, 30, socialite son of Walter Buck, Baltimore attorney, was drowned when he failed to swim ashore from a capsized boat near Gibson Island.

Buck had been riding in a small skiff with two friends, Ernest J.

Tokyo Fliers Raid Chinese; Battle Rages

Barracks at Langfang Bombed; Peiping Fears Attack.

Japanese Cabinet Meets; Navy Plans 'Emergency Measures.'

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Monday), July 26.—Japanese warplanes bombarded Chinese barracks at Langfang early today, Japanese dispatches from Tientsin said, in a new outbreak of hostilities between Chinese and Japanese armies in North China.

The Chinese suffered heavy losses.

Fighting began at midnight at Langfang, midway between Peiping and Tientsin, despite last week's truce.

Five Japanese were wounded, and the battle continued through early morning. The Japanese ordered a unit of bombing planes into the attack, when Chinese forces refused to surrender.

The new outbreak followed by only a few hours an ultimatum by the Japanese army to Gen. Chang Tsu-chung to effect evacuation of the Thirty-seventh Chinese Division in accordance with the truce agreement of last Monday.

Both Chinese and Japanese troops were to withdraw under the truce, but the Thirty-seventh Division held to its positions and began erecting new barricades in the Peiping battle area.

Severe artillery and machine-gun fire continued this morning, and the use of air forces for the first time added a more serious phase to the North China crisis, which resulted when Japanese and Chinese troops clashed on the night of July 7 at Marco Polo Bridge 10 miles west of Peiping.

Peiping Fears Attack.

Predictions again were made here that the Japanese army eventually would attack the ancient walled city of Peiping itself.

The Japanese government viewed the situation with extreme gravity and ordered "all measures" be taken against further Chinese attacks.

The cabinet met to consider the situation in the light of fresh hostilities, and the navy department commissioned Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, chief of the Third Fleet, to carry out "emergency measures."

The Japanese military command said the fighting began last night when Chinese attacked Japanese soldiers who were repairing military telephone wires.

The Thirty-seventh Chinese Division of the Twenty-ninth Army is the most militant group of those opposing Japanese "special economic interests" in North China and has been the one most frequently involved in clashes with the Japanese.

Provincial Revolt Urged.

Peiping (Monday), July 26 (U.P.).—Gov. Jin Ju-keng, of the autonomous East Hopei Province, issued a manifesto today, calling on the people to sever connections with the Nanking central government.

Yin telegraphed Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan, chairman of the Hopei-Chahar political council, to "seize this rare and unrepeatable opportunity to settle the North China situation peacefully."

He asked Sung to raise the East Hopei five-barred flag and "restore the republican form of government."

The "fate of the nation" hung on Sung's choice, Yin said.

Yin, who contributed heavily last year to the Mongolian irregulars who were invading Suiyuan Province, is strongly pro-Japan

Tokyo Issues Warning.

Toyko, July 25 (AP).—The war office tonight issued a sharp warning to the Nanking government that Japan would take "drastic measures" if the central Chinese government interferes with efforts to bring about a settlement of the north China crisis.

The warning came on the heels of a Domei Agency report from Fengtai, Japanese military barracks near Peiping, that Chinese troops of the Thirty-seventh Division were constructing encampments and trenches along the Peiping-Tientsin Railroad west of Lukouchiao.

The agency's Peiping correspondent reported Gen. Hsiung Pin, vice commander of the central Chinese army—which Tokyo's war office warned to stay below the Yellow River—was in Peiping, conferring with Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan on military arrangements.

Gen. Sung is chairman of the Hopei-Chahar political council and the man with whom the Japanese military command dealt in its efforts to settle the North China dispute by direct negotiations.

The war office, meanwhile, sent a stern protest to Gen. Sung concerning the delay of Chinese troops in withdrawing from the Peiping "war zone."

Mussolini's Friend Who Shot Count to Get Light Penalty

Paris, July 25 (U.P.).—Mme. Madeliene de Fontanges, sultry-eyed divorcee who shot Count Charles Pineton de Chambrun because "he shattered my unforgetable hours of love with Benito Mussolini," was assured a light sentence tonight.

The examining magistrate, after a long police inquiry that involved well-known diplomats of two nations, ordered her tried on charges of non-declaration of firearms, battery and mayhem.

Her sentence can not be more than five years; is likely to be a two or three-year term. She could have faced long imprisonment at hard labor or solitary confinement.

100,000 Battle Near Madrid; Brunete Retaken By Rebels; Planes Kill 65 in Barcelona

150 Others Wounded in Terrific Dawn Air Raid.

Women, Children Are Mowed Down

Bombs Hurled on City, Machine Guns Rake Streets.

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, Spain, July 25.—At least 65 persons were killed and 150 injured today when eight insurgent planes carried out a terrific dawn raid on Barcelona. The planes showered bombs on the city for an hour and machine-gunned citizens as they ran for safety.

The attack began at 3:30 a. m. Three planes first flew over and dropped powerful flares which illuminated most of the city, making targets easily visible to other planes which soon arrived with bombs.

The bombardment was intense. As frightened men, women and children ran from their homes for places of greater safety, the planes swooped down and opened machine guns on the streets.

Residents of a section of the city which suffered most declared there also was shelling from the sea, but this has not been confirmed by authorities.

It was the worst air bombing of the war for Barcelona, largest port and industrial center of Spain and capital of the autonomous Catalan regime, allied with the Madrid-Valencia government.

(Valencia suffered two disastrous air attacks in April and May, with a total of more than 300 persons killed. Those attacks were believed to have come from insurgent bases on Mallorca, Balearic Islands.)

A woman and her 16-year-old son, who were gathering mattresses to take with them to a refuge, were buried in debris as their home collapsed. They were extricated uninjured, with one mattress under and one over them.

New Peace Move Planned.

London, July 25 (AP).—Britain will make a new effort to break the non-intervention in Spain deadlock tomorrow.

The Earl of Plymouth, chairman of the 27-nation non-intervention committee, will ask the directing sub-committee's approval of a questionnaire to each member nation.

Its object will be to determine whether Italo-German objections to Britain's non-intervention compromise are fundamental or apply only to the method of procedure, and whether the nations unanimously approve going ahead with the "hand-off-Spain" scheme.

'Union' Prisoners Escape; Return With Hangovers

South Pittsburgh, Tenn., July 25.—Officer H. N. Minnis reported gleefully today that 12 prisoners who staged a sitdown strike for free tobacco and the right to sit in front of the jail every night were begging for terms as a result of a combination of hang-overs and a bread and water diet.

The prisoners refused to budge yesterday when ordered out to work on the city streets, and told Officer Minnis they were "union men striking" for tobacco and privileges.

"They broke jail last night and got drunk—so drunk they all came back," Officer Minnis asserted. "They were powerful thirsty and hungry this morning, but they got nothing but bread and water."

They got out of jail, he explained, by "breaking down a door somehow."

"Their spokesman—he's got about 30 days for getting drunk three times—told me they wanted to quit this 'union' business and go back to work.

"All they wanted, he said, was something to eat besides bread and water—but that's all they got today and that's all they'll get in the morning. Why, them fellows like to worked me to death today toting ice water."

Minnis said he couldn't promise the strikers "anything" because "the police chief wants to try them for jail breaking."

Preacher, 7, Hunts A Couple to Marry At Revival Rally

Bloomington, Ill., July 25 (AP).—The Rev. Charles Jaynes, jr., 7 years old and billed as the world's youngest preacher—will perform his first marriage ceremony here at 1 p. m. tomorrow—provided his sponsors find a couple for him to marry.

The Rev. Mr. Jaynes, a butterball of a boy, who has delivered sermons from coast to coast, received interviewers today before the start of a week of revival meetings.

He was cald in a red bandana sunsuit, anklets and red bedroom slippers. He confided his chief ambition was to drive a fire truck. He was ordained last Thursday at Trinity Tabernacle in Peoria, Ill., and cited for membership in the International Ministers Federation. He has been preaching since he was three.

Italy Launches First Warship Of 35,000 Tons

100,000 Cheer at Trieste; German Delegation Attends.

By the Associated Press.

Trieste, Italy, July 25.—The 35,000-ton battleship Vittorio Veneto, first of the new superdreadnaughts Italy hopes will give her one of the world's most powerful navies, was launched today in the presence of King Emanuele and Queen Elena.

The wife of a workman, Signora Maria Bertuzzi, chosen by Premier Mussolini's orders, was sponsor for the new man-of-war. As 10,000 workmen and 100,000 other onlookers cheered, she pressed the button which sent the great hull down the ways.

Signora Bertuzzi's husband has been employed in Italian shipyards nearly 40 years and recently was decorated.

German Delegation Attends.

A delegation from the German labor front attended.

The Vittorio Veneto is the first tangible expression of Italy's determination to have "an ocean going navy," one which will carry Italian seapower beyond the confines of the Mediterranean, especially into the Red Sea, the Black Sea and the Indian Ocean, following the eastward course of Italian imperial expansion.

This determination was given official expression in the Chamber of Deputies recently by Admiral Domencio Cavagnari, undersecretary of the navy, whose announcement of a new naval program was considered by diplomats to indicate a desire to challenge Britain's naval power.

Cavagnari was among the high officials at today's launching.

Forming part of the background in Trieste Harbor was the Navy's first battle squadron, made up of

25 Are Felled By Lightning Bolt

Alton, Mo., July 25 (AP).—Twenty-five persons were rendered unconscious today when lightning struck a tree in front of the Riverton Country Church near here. Four were injured seriously.

The victims were scattered on the ground by the force of the impact. Ten persons were treated by a physician. One 5-year-old boy is not expected to live.

Brother Joins Rev. Niemoeller In German Jail

Arrested by Gestapo After Preaching Message From Imprisoned Pastor.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 25.—The Rev. Wilhelm Niemoeller, younger brother of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, fiery leader of the Protestant opposition to Nazi domination of the church, today joined his brother in jail.

A trustworthy authority said he was arrested by secret police after he had preached three fighting sermons today to overflow congregatoins in his brother's Dahlem parish, at St. Anne's Church, Jesus Christ Church and St. Anne's Parish House.

The Rev. Wilhelm came to Berlin from Bielefeld, where he has a church of his own, especially to occupy his brother's pulpits after the latter had been arrested July 1 on charges of inciting to disobedience.

The arrest was made as secretly as possible. Few in Berlin knew of it tonight.

Reads Brother's Message.

Wilhelm Niemoeller irritated the Nazis in three things:

He read to his congregation a message from his brother in jail.

He prayed for the success of the world church conference just concluded at Oxford, England, which the Nazis considered unfriendly to them.

He preached a sermon, marked by innuendo, based on the tenth chapter of Second Corinthians, of which the twelfth verse reads: "For we do not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise."

Martin Niemoeller's message from jail urged his followers not to believe current stories that several pastors, fearing arrest, had fled.

The younger Niemoeller joined the Nazi party in 1926 but was ejected in 1933 after Adolf Hitler became chancellor. The reason was his opposition to the "German Christian" faith the Nazis tried to establish.

Only Friday a group of Potestant pastors sent letters to the Gestapo (secret police) announcing they would continue to disobey Nazi decrees seeking to control the church. They declared support of all their imprisoned brethren. It was disclosed then 149 Protestant leaders had been arrested and 44 still were in jail.

Heaviest Fighting of Spanish Civil War Is Raging.

Conflict Goes On Throughout Night

Aviators Strafe Troops Locked in Hand-to-Hand Struggle.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 25.—A Spanish government communique announced today that Brunete, outpost of its crucial attack against the besiegers of Madrid, had fallen to the insurgents.

As the deadliest conflict of the civil war continued 15 miles from the capital, the government said it had attacked southwest of Brunete.

"The enemy displayed formidable resistance and with the aid of its aviation and artillery succeeded in foiling our advance and capturing Brunete," it said.

The insurgents pressed on toward Villanueva de la Canada, where the government asserted its forces "strengthened their positions" south of the town.

Government sources minimized the loss of Brunete, saying the insurgents won ground only at the loss of many men and that counter attacks can be launched when "the enemy is already exhausted."

The battle has surged back and forth over the little village of Brunete with both sides throwing greater forces of men and weapons into the area than any previous battle. The government abandoned the village once, but then said its troops fought their way back into it.

Planes Strafe Troops.

Rival air forces fought each other and punished opposing ground forces in some of the most extensive operations of the war, bitterly contending for the all-important mastery of the air.

According to the government version, the loss of Brunete had been feared for some days. Fifteen miles west of Madrid, it was in a vulnerable position at the spear-point of the government's recent offensive toward Navalcarnero.

No sooner had it been lost than the government began heavy counter-attacks to regain it. More than once during the night men engaged in hand-to-hand fighting, while tanks rumbled over the fields and ruins of the little town.

Government officers declared that today their troops reached some houses on the outskirts of Brunete. From behind barricades thrown up with the rubbish of ruined homes, the insurgents met all attempts to advance with withering fire.

North of Brunete the government asserted that "except for minor rectifications of their lines" its troops had been able to hold all positions.

100,000 in Battle.

Government officers said the strength of insurgent attacks renewed at dawn today indicated the enemy was throwing all its resources into the battle. They declared, however, that the morale of government forces was high and that they had shown extraordinary powers of resistance to the deadly insurgent drives.

Each side poured a rain of shells against the other, scarring and pitting the rolling countryside around Brunete as in no previous clash of this war.

Fifty thousand men on each side were said to be engaged in the fight for Brunete.

Air battles constantly flecked the sky with the shimmer of blinding white planes, which roared low over the struggling infantrymen to machine-gun them or rose to meet their own kind in combat. Bombers of both sides patrolled enemy reserve positions, breaking up infantry and other concentrations as quickly as they were formed.

Today was the feast day of Santiago (St. James), patron of Old Spain, and the insurgents appeared to be trying to smash government resistance in his honor.

Old X-Ray Burns Kill Manufacturer

Los Angeles, July 25 (AP).—Burns suffered ten years ago when he was manufacturing X-ray machines caused the death today of Thomas B. Rider, 52, electrical engineer.

"We did not know as much about X-rays then as now," said Marion A. Rider, a son. "My father, in showing doctors and nurses how to operate the machines, received deep burns from the rays.

"These eventually reached the skin as small, malignant growths. My father had had 640 of these removed. The last to appear was on his brain and brought his death.

"I know of but four similar deaths in the United States."

'Lord Fauntleroy' Burnett Dies After Saving 4 as Boat Upsets

By the Associated Press.

Manhasset, N. Y., July 25.—Vivian Burnett, the original "Little Lord Fauntleroy," died today as he had lived—a stout-hearted ready-witted man of action.

The son of Frances Hodgson Burnett, who served as a model for his novelist-mother's most celebrated literary creation, succumbed to a heart attack believed to have been brought on by his exertions in rescuing four persons from an overturned sailboat in Manhasset Bay.

After he had picked up the floundering sailing party, consisting of two men and two women, Burnett put his craft about and headed for the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club. Suddenly he slumped at the wheel of his yawl. He was dead before the boat docked.

On board the Burnett yawl, Delight III, when the capsized sailboat was sighted were Mr. and Mrs. George Riggs, of Port Washington, Long Island, and their daughter, Anne Riggs; Guy Minnick and Rodman Dekay, also of Port Washington; Mrs. A. R. Forbush, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. and Mrs. Burnett and their daughter, Dorinda.

During the excitement of dragging the drenched yachting party aboard, Burnett, as skipper, actively directed operations and barked commands.

High, 'Spanked' By Roosevelt, Quits League

Good Neighbor Director Wants More Time for Literature.

Dr. Stanley High, the bad little good boy of the Administration, resigned as director of the Good Neighbor League last night, nearly six months after he received from President Roosevelt one of the most widely publicized spankings in years.

The resignation was attributed in a statement by the league to his desire "to devote himself more largely to literary and lecture work and to other personal matters."

It was this literary work which led to the verbal chastisement inflicted by the White House. In a February issue of the Saturday Evening Post this year Dr. High wrote an article which, in effect, read old line Democrats out of their party.

Called Close Adviser.

Worse still, the Saturday Evening Post inscribed above the article an editorial precede which asserted that Dr. High had the Washington reputation of being one of the President's "close advisers."

This intimation infuriated the late Senate Floor Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, and other Democrats. Vice President Garner was a notable exception. He was represented as being vastly amused by the piece.

But the highly vocal—in private—ire of the other Democrats so impressed the President that he issued this statement:

"The President announced the death of the 'official spokesman' in March, 1933. He now announces the passing of the so-called authoritative spokesmen—those who write as 'one of the President's close advisers.'"

The effect was to remove Dr. High from Democratic councils, to all intents and purposes, although he had been on the pay roll of the Democratic National Committee for a long time, had occupied the office of Louis McHenry Howe, intimate adviser of Mr. Roosevelt, and according to report, had been drafted by the President himself from the National Broadcasting Co. to aid in the latter's campaign.

Dr. High has continued his politico-literary work since, however. In a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, he devoted an article to prospects that Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace will be the Democratic nominee in 1940.

To replace Dr. High the Good Neighbor League announced appointment of Dr. Charles Stelzle, of New York, and disclosed it has been "reincorporated in order to give the organization wider scope in its operations in point of membership and in its activities," and that Walter A. Jones, of Pittsburgh and Washington, has been elected president.

The League's Statement.

In its statement, the league said: "The Good Neighbor League has local branches in over 100 cities and town in 23 States. Among its members are educators, social workers, businessmen, industrialists, clergymen, labor men, and other groups. Over 3,000 clergymen are members.

"According to a statement issued by the league it is its purpose 'to break down racial, social, economic and general class prejudice and hatred which separate men and women of good will, through a better understanding of their interdependence, and to discover ways of mutual and neighborly helpfulness. The Good Neighbor League will oppose those policies, movements and persons in our country which threaten these principles and support those which seek to advance them. The league will thus develop a united force which can be relied upon in national and local emergencies and whenever the interests of the people need to be safeguarded . . .'

"Jones formerly was president of the United States Sheet & Window Glass Co., but is now vice president and director of several oil-producing companies in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. He was appointed by President Roosevelt as Presidential member of the coal code, and as such is known as one of the authors of the Guffey coal bill . . .

"Dr. Stelzle is a graduate of New York's East Side tenements, where he lived for 20 years. After working for eight years as apprentice and journeyman machinist in the plant of R. Hoe & Co., newspaper press manufacturers in New York City, he was ordained as a Presbyterian clergyman, becoming the pastor of workingmen's churches in Minneapolis, St. Louis and New York. He organized and directed for ten years the department of church and labor of the Presbyterian Church."

WPA Chief's Son Admits Marriage

Scarsdale, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—David Hopkins, 22-year-old son of WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, said tonight that he and Cherry Preisser, 19-year-old dancer, were married June 22 at Gretna, La.

Young Hopkins said he met Miss Preisser last winter while he was studying political science at the University of Chicago.

She is now playing at a Chicago theater. Hopkins is at his family home here completing his college course by mail.

He said he expected her to rejoin him in two weeks and that they probably would live in New York.

Police Seize Barry, Irish Army Leader

Cork, Irish Free State, July 25 (AP).—Tom Barry, leader of the Irish Republican army, was under arrest today after having been in hiding for more than a year. He was seized by police last night as he was leaving a wedding party at a Cork hotel.

Barry, chief of an extreme faction whose republicanism was too strong even for President Eamon De Valera's taste, had been sought by police since March, 1936, when Vice Admiral Henry Boyle Townshend Somerville was murdered at Castle Townsend.

Ex-Dean's Wife to Testify.

Greenfield, Mass., July 25 (AP).—Counsel for Thomas E. Elder, once dean of Mount Hermon, tonight prepared to place on the witness stand the elderly educator's wife and his attractive former stenographer to refute the charge he threatened S. Allan Norton with a gun.

Pennsylvanian Supporting President in Court Plea; Defeated in First Attempt to Seek Seat in Lower House.

By Liam Kieth Lenihan.

Representative James P. McGranery's voice booms like the wild surf-roll that incessantly beats against the precipitous slate-gray sea cliffs of County Donegal, where his parents were born.

The 42-year-old bachelor Congressman from Pennsylvania's second district is a thoroughgoing New Dealer. So thorough, in fact, he indorses the Rooseveltian program "without exception." And that goes for the court reorganization plan which has caused winds, hot and cold, to blow incessantly across the continent.

Biographical note: He was born in Philadelphia July 8, 1895; was educated in parochial schools and attended Maher Preparatory School; at the age of 20 enlisted in the United States Air Force, and was commissioned pilot observer; served for the duration of the war; also served as adjutant in the 111th Infantry. After the war he took up the study of law and was graduated from Temple University; took up the general practice of law in 1927 and has been hard at it ever since; was a member of the Democratic State committee, 1928-32; was unsuccessful candidate for district attorney of Philadelphia in 1931 and for election to the Seventy-fourth Congress in 1934. In 1935 he was appointed chairman of the registration commission for the Quaker City by Gov. George H. Earle. Last November he rode in on the "coat-tails" of the President by a plurality of more than 20,000 votes. He is a member of the Whitemarsh Country Club, Catholic Philopatrian Literary Institute, American Legion, Electrotypers and Finishers Union, American Catholic Historical Society, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Philadelphia and Pennsylvania bar associations.

Representative McGranery belongs to the House Banking and Currency Committee. He explains it this way. "Everybody talks so much and knows so little about currency I thought I might add a little to the confusion," he said.

As for labor, though he represents a cross section of the Quaker city from professional bankers down to the water front, he stands for the workingman and the right to organize.

Visit of George May Have Effect On Irish Politics

London, July 25 (U.P.).—Political significance was attached tonight to the projected visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to "loyal" north Ireland, which Irish Free-Staters hope will some day join them in a united Irish republic.

The royal couple will leave London Tuesday and arrive in Belfast Wednesday morning to spend the day there as part of the coronation celebrations. But far-reaching effects in the situation between Britain and the free state may result.

President Devalera and his supporters will be particularly interested to see with what enthusiasm the royal visitors are greeted and how far it indicates the determination of Ulster not to be separated from Britain.

Father-in-Law Killed, Policeman Shot in Row

Middlesboro, Ky., July 25 (AP).—Joe Nagle, 58, was dead and his son-in-law, City Patrolman Eb Tinsley, about 35, was in critical condition today followed a shooting affray late last night at the Nagle home.

Police Chief Charles Minton said the shooting climaxed "either a political argument or a series of petty quarrels the men have been having lately," he said. No charges would be filed pending the outcome of Tinsley's wound.

Banana Ship's Crew On 'Sit-Down' Strike

New Orleans, July 25 (AP).—Members of the crew of a New Orleans banana steamship reported to have "mutined" last night as the ship lay at anchor in the Mississippi River today described their action as a "sit-down" strike.

The report of a "mutiny" was made by Dr. L. A. Meraux, sheriff of St. Bernard Parish, in an appeal to New Orleans police, who declined to send men out of Orleans Parish.

Man Gored by Bull Near Death Here; Kin Routed Animal

Gored and trampled by a bull at the Blue Plains (D. C.) Home for the Aged, Harry Thompson, 32, foreman of the farm, was near death in Casualty Hospital last night.

Unconscious, with a crushed chest and fractured skull, the man was rescued from the bull pen by his brother, Jess Thompson, who drove the animal away with a pitchfork.

Physicians said Thompson suffered a fractured skull, concussion, several broken ribs and a crushed chest.

Jess Thompson told Detective Sergt. John Wise that his brother had been employed at the farm for about eight years and has done much work around the bull.

L. A. Everett Rites Set for Tomorrow

Louis A. Everett, 67, merchant in the Southeast section for almost half a century, died yesterday at his home, 223 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

He was a senior partner in the firm of Louis A. Everett & Son for 37 years. Mr. Everett was born near Leonardtown, Md. Mass will be said at St. Peter's Church, Second and C streets southeast, at 9 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Everett is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Everett; two sons, Charles and Richard; three daughters, Sister Mary Angels, of the Holy Cross Order, Lancaster, Pa.; Mrs. John L. Fitzgerald, of Washington, and Mrs. William A. Kelly, of Silver Spring.

Spoils Menace Seen in Bill for Reorganization

Stengle Charges Flaws and Contradictions, Asks Revisions.

Calling the pending reorganization bill one "for the spoilsmen" and condemning its "contradictions," Charles I. Stengle, president, American Federation of Government Employes, yesterday appealed for legislation that "will plug up the loopholes in the classified service and really extend it to include all but actually policy-making positions."

The A. F. G. E. president searchingly pointed to what he regarded as the flaws. "The outstanding contradictions of the bill are contained in Section 2 (a) which enumerates the powers of the President to revamp the structure of government. The powers therein stated are broad, as one will see in the wording of this portion:

"Sec. 2 (a). 'Whenever the President, after investigation shall find and declare that any transfer, retransfer, co-ordination, consolidation, reorganization, segregation or abolition of the whole or any part of any agency, or the functions thereof, is necessary to accomplish any of the purposes set forth in Section 1 of this title, he may by executive order, subject to the limitations hereinafter provided . . .'"

Stengle believed this subsection clothes the President with the broadest powers "and immediately fixes broad limitations. What contribution these powers might make toward the advancement of the spoils system are not difficult to visualize, and because the limitations are conflicting, they do not afford any great protection," he said.

His conclusions, he said, were reached without impugning pernicious motives to anyone. "What is stated in this analysis . . . should not be understood to apply to any person now in an executive or administrative capacity. I will say that we know those who are now holding the reins of Government, but we do not know those who are to come and that is the disquieting feature of it all," he said.

President Quizzed On 1940 'Plans'

New York, July 25 (AP).—Amos R. E. Pinchot, New York attorney and brother of former Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, in a letter to President Roosevelt today called for "a clear outline of your program and of your intentions, including whether or not you propose to remain in the White House after 1940."

The letter, a 28-page document, attacked the Supreme Court bill, now shelved, the Executive reorganization bill and the Black-Connery wage and hour measure.

Pinchot said he based his attack on a study of the measures "as they came from the White House" and claimed their passage without changes, and then subsequent upholding by what he termed a "packed court" would "throw the country into fascism in a fortnight."

Explaining he had studied the three proposals before any Congressional changes were made, Pinchot wrote Mr. Roosevelt, "I fear . . . you have not studied these bills long enough to gather their full force, especially when all three of them are considered together. The original drafts—as approved by yourself—are of immense importance . . . because, only by studying them can the country discover where you propose to lead it."

Man Kills Wife, 29, On Way to Church

Utica, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—Mrs. Genevieve Scarano, 29, was shot to death while walking to church today. District Attorney John J. McGinty said her estranged husband confessed he killed her in a jealous rage.

Scores of other churchgoers watched the shooting, horror-struck.

"I don't know why I did it," McGinty quoted Vitantorio Scarano, 45, as saying: "I wanted her to come back and live with me."

McGinty said the husband tried to commit suicide by butting his head against a cell wall. He was taken to a hospital under police guard for treatment of scalp lacerations.

Mother and 3 Girls Die as Home Burns

Fredonia, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—A mother and her three daughters were burned to death early today in their home. The husband and three young sons escaped by jumping from a second-story window.

The bodies of Mrs. William Logan, 36; Gerty, 15; Mary Ann, 12, and Jean, 2, were found near a window, which they had tried to reach. Logan said his wife awakened him and their sons, William, jr., 10; Edward, 7, and Jack, 6, who followed him to the window and jumped.

After Logan recovered from partial suffocation he went to aid the wife and daughters, but discovered their bodies near the window.

Women Again Ask Inquiry in Overton Vote

Mrs. Hammond, Foe of Long, Seeks Senate Action in Louisiana.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, July 25.—Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, chairman of the women's committee of Louisiana, once the foe of the late Huey Long, asked Congress again today to investigate the election of Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), Lousiana.

Before Long's death the committee sought his as well as Overton's removal from the Senate on charges of irregularity in connection with Overton's election. Long helped elect Overton.

The petition, addressed to Vice President Garner, said in part:

Cites Senate Report.

"1. For three long years we have petitioned the Senate to conduct a fair, full and fearless investigation of our definite and specific charges having been filed with the Senate on February 14, 1934.

"2. The evidence which we have stood ready to present during these three years goes far beyond even the report of the Senate's own investigating committee which said the methods used to secure a seat in the United States Senate for John H. Overton 'cannot be too severely condemned,' were 'vicious and abhorrent' and were 'a fraud on the rights of any free people.' Nevertheless the Senate has never to this day heard a single one of our witnesses nor has the Senate examined a single piece of our evidence.

Asks Committee Sift.

"3. In June, 1935, we presented to the Senate through the Vice President, Mr. Garner, a petition which asked for a redress of grievances committed by the Senate itself. Said petition though delivered to the Vice President was not presented to the Senate and referred to any Senate committee.

"4. In 1936 we again presented said petition and again the Vice President refused or neglected to present said petition to the Senate and refer it to a Senate committee. We have been denied the right of petition—the only means by which American citizens can communicate with Congress for a redress of grievances.

"After three long years we now petition the Senate again for a fair hearing of our specific charges authenticated under oath against John H. Overton (said charges being attached hereto) and for a redress of our grievances. We request that this petition be presented to the Senate and be referred to a committee of appropriate jurisdiction."

Bank and Insurance Stocks Rise in Week

New York, July 25.—New York City bank stocks displayed a firmer tendency during the past week and closed slightly higher, according to records compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on July 23 amounted to $2,032,913,000, compared with $2,021,054,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of 0.59 per cent.

Insurance stocks also registered an improvement for the week, according to the report.

The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on July 23 totaled $615,008,000, compared with $611,541,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $3,467,000, of 0.57 per cent.

Alcoholic Case Gain Reported by Dry Group

The number of patients taking the cure for alcoholism at the Keeley Institute have increased 70 per cent from 1932 to 1936, it was announced yesterday by the Antisaloon League of America.

The league gave as reasons for the increase "the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, the gradual improvement in business conditons and the changing attitude toward morals."

First American Music At Salzburg Cheered

Salzburg, Austria, July 25 (AP).—The first American composition played at the Salzburg musical festival the ultramodern "symphony in one movement" by 27-year-old Samuel Barber, today received an enthusiastic reception.

The audience, including many Americans, called the black-haired, boyish composer to the stage three times with continuous applause.

Egypt Hails Farouk's Arrival To Ascend Throne Thursday

First Independent King in 400 Years Will Have Brilliant Parade.

By the Associated Press.

Alexandria, Egypt, July 25.—A week of festivities such as the old Valley of the Nile has not seen in modern times began today as 17-year-old King Farouk I came home to ascend his throne next Thursday.

Great crowds cheered wildly as the liner El Nil entered the harbor here, bringing Egypt's first independent monarch in four centuries, his mother and his four sisters back from a five-month vacation tour of Europe.

Thursday in the Parliament Building in Cairo King Farouk will take the oath of office which will signalize commencement of his active reign.

According to European ideas he will not be 18 until next February 11, but the Moslem calendar and custom will make him 18 on July 29 and therefore qualified to rule.

To Rule Without Crown.

Farouk will not be crowned as European monarchs are—although he was an interested spectator at the recent coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in London. Egypt, long under domination of foreign powers, has no crown. A procession through the streets of Cairo and the oath taking before Parliament will constitute the ceremony.

Cruisers escorted the El Nil as the royal ship entered port today. Airplanes droned overhead, guns boomed a 21-gun salute and sirens shrieked from ships in the harbor. The royal party drove through cheering throngs to the station and entrained for Cairo.

The King was to go to his country palace at Koubbeh, near Cairo, to remain until his investiture.

Thousands Pour In.

Thousands of visitors were pouring into flag-draped Cairo. Nearly all space on balconies and rooftops along the route of Thursday's procession was rented, since few besides the royal family, high officials and foreign diplomats will be able to crowd into the Chamber of Deputies to see the accession rites.

Successor to the ancient pharaohs, Farouk is the first independent ruler of Egypt since the nameluke kings were crushed by the Ottoman empire more than 400 years ago.

The Anglo-Egyptian treaty, signed August 26, 1936, ended the 55-year-old British military occupation and left the Egyptian monarch an independent sovereign allied with Great Britain.

Four months before the treaty was negotiated Farouk's father, King Fuad I, died, and since then a regency has governed, awaiting the day the youth would reach his majority.

Guard to Number 1,200.

Two of the regents, his maternal Uncle Sherif Pasha Sabry and Azig Pasha Izzet, will ride with Farouk in Thursday's procession. The third regent, Prince Mohamed Ali, will have a special place because of his position as their presumptive to the throne. Farouk was the late King's only son.

Detachments of the royal bodyguard numbering 1,200 men will escort the young King as he rides in a gilded coach similar to Britain's state coach to the Maglis an Nuwwab—Chamber of Deputies.

KING FAROUK I.

Though women play no official role in Egypt, Dowager Queen Nazli and the King's sisters, Princesses Fawzieh, Faiza, Faika and Fathia, will occupy a special box for the ceremonies.

To Broadcast Ceremony.

In the oath of office Farouk will promise "to respect and obey the Egyptian constitution, maintain the prestige of the country and defend its territory."

The ceremony will be broadcast, a thing without precedent in Egypt, and the government has supplied a loudspeaker in every village for the day.

Returning to the palace the King will hold his first levee for princes, diplomats and the flower of Egyptian and Arab nobility. A luncheon for members of the royal family will follow.

In the afternoon the war minister is to present the King a field marshal's baton signifying his command of the nation's armed forces.

Meteors to Start Periodic Shower Early Next Month

The meteoric shower known as the Perseids will make it periodic return in greatest numbers between August 10 and 12, the American Nature Association reported yesterday.

Venus will also be resplendent in August in the east just before sunrise. High in the east along the Milky Way will be the familiar Northern Cross in Sygnus, and in the south, Scorpio and Sagittarius, not far above the horizon. Jupiter will be in Sagittarius and visible most of the night. Mercury will be at its greatest eastern elongation on August 18, and may possibly be seen in the west after sunset.

N. J. Holds Spiritualist In Threat to President

Atlantic City, N. J., July 25 (U.P.).—The Rev. William West, 40-year-old Puerto Rican, was held tonight for "investigation of sanity and for Federal authorities" after he allegedly admitted writing threatening letters to President Roosevelt, according to police.

West has been lecturing here for 15 years as a spiritualist. His arrest today ended a week's search by Federal and city authorities for the writer of several "crank" letters addressed to the President.

U. S. Loan Curb Hinted in Drive To Slash Costs

President May Ask Agencies to Tighten Up in Move to Balance Budget.

By the Associated Press.

Fiscal officials passed the word yesterday President Roosevelt may instruct Government credit agencies to tighten their lending and collection agencies in an effort to balance the budget this fiscal year.

This move, they said, would supplement the Administration's announced program to curtail expenditures.

Mr. Roosevelt already has asked department heads to impound 10 per cent of many appropriations. Officials expressed belief that this order, plus increased receipts from credit agencies, will materially reduce or eliminate the $418,000,000 deficit forecast for this fiscal year.

They said that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and similar agencies could improve the fiscal picture by restricting lending policies, by declining to grant extensions of outstanding loans and by liquidating assets.

These persons added, however, that it may be difficult for some agencies to increase receipts appreciably because many of their best loans already have been liquidated.

The R. F. C., for instance, has collected $4,640,086,000, or 71 per cent, of all loans other than those to governmental agencies. Railroads now have replaced banks as the biggest R. F. C. debtors, owing $354,320,000.

Thus far this fiscal year, repayments to lending agencies have fallen short of last year. Since July 1, collections have exceeded outlays by only $17,087,000, compared with a $204,066,000 excess of collections in the corresponding period last year.

A $75,000,000 decline in direct spending for "recovery and relief" has been offset partially by a $55,000,000 increase in expenditures for ordinary Government operations.

The deficit already has reached $194,549,000, compared with $62,729,000 in the same period a year ago.

Chicago Seeks Doctor's Aid in Syphilis Fight

7,000 Asked to Join in Mass Attack on Social Disease.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 25.—Seven thousand physicians were asked today by Dr. Louis Schmidt, head of Mayor Edward J. Kelly's committee for control of veneral disease, to enlist in Chicago's first mass attack on the syphilis plague.

Their assistance was requested after health authorities decided to poll 1,000,000 Chicagoans on the question of whether they would submit to free, secret blood tests by their family doctors to uncover the presence of the disease.

The campaign is sponsored by the United States Public Health Service.

Dr. Schmidt said the physicians would be called upon to supply data on all syphilis cases under their care and observation in the four months period ended June 30. They would be requested to withhold the names of their patients.

The city has arranged to have 35 senior medical students, representing all the city's recognized medical schools, available to aid physicians lacking the time to make out reports. The students, after a special course of instruction, also will interpret the data in clinic records. Dr. Schmidt said 2,976 clinical case histories already had been analyzed in the campaign.

WPA Workers To Aid.

"No other public health problem has ever been attacked on such a scale as this," Dr. Schmidt said. "The surveys are the first step. If we find that several hundred thousand citizens are in favor of the blood tests we expect that the city and State will furnish funds for laboratory tests."

He said clergymen had been asked to urge their congregations to co-operate with the public health service in the interests of community welfare. The services of 300 WPA employes have been contributed to the work.

The first 250,000 questionnaires have been mailed. The remainder will be sent as soon as they are prepared.

Dr. Oliver C. Wenger, United States Health Service specialist, said the program "aims to put the population of Chicago through a sieve by means of the blood tests. Those free from the disease will pass through the sieve; the others will be sifted out and for the first time we will have an actual census of syphilis. It will then be in the open, where we can combat it with medical methods."

Chicago Plan Praised.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago is the first American city to attack the problem of syphilis in a realistic way, officials of the U. S. Public Health Service said yesterday.

"The efforts of Chicago health authorities to make a city-wide diagnosis of the syphilis problem by asking everyone to submit to a blood test is, so far as we know, the first time in the history of the country that a major disease has been attacked so intelligently and thoroughly," one of Surgeon General Thomas Parran's assistants said.

Thousands of cases of the disease which have not been suspected by either physician or patient unquestionbaly will be discovered, he added. The victims, instead of progressing to fatal stages of syphilis, will begin treatment which will result in complete cures in the great majority of cases.

The Chicago campaign is a shining example of what must be done by hundreds of cities throughout the country if the present campaign to eradicate syphilis is to be successful, another of Dr. Parran's medical assistants said.

"Syphilis is the next great plague to be eliminated in the United States," he said, "and it can be eradicated much more easily than tuberculosis is being stamped out. We have no known definite cure for tuberculosis but we do have a specific treatment for syphilis."

Berry Picking Season Halts Moonshiners

Charleston, W. Va., July 25 (AP).—Berry Picking time may be all right for those who like to eat them, but it complicates things for alcohol tax investigators. Raleigh R. Wall, head of the State alcohol tax unit, said today liquor still confiscations decreased recently and added his agents have found "any number" of abandoned stills.

He explained: "Moonshiners refuse to operate while the hills are overrun with berry pickers."

Lammers Family All Together for Last Time At Burial of Seven Burned to Death in Auto

Post Staff Photos.

Throngs filled the cemetery at Laurel, Md., yesterday as last rites were performed for the seven victims of a truck-car crash on the Crain highway Friday. Below, the Rev. Joseph Myer, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, stands at the single grave with the Rev. G. A. Spiesberger, Jessup, Md., and the Rev. George J. Larkin, of Bowie, who assisted.

Bitterness Absent.

Father Myer said that the bereaved mother, even as she underwent the shock of her loss, found no recourse to bitterness. She told him, the priest recalled: "I don't know why it happened. I don't know what I have done to deserve anything like this. So God must have some blessing to bestow—and I see it that way."

"Here is resignation to God's will," said Father Myer to his people, "resignation to such an extent that they say God's will be done."

It was around the burial spot that Father Myer and his assisting priest next met with members of the Lammers family. He sprinkled holy water over the single grave that had been made ready for the tragedy victims, and petitioned God to grant them eternal rest.

With him stood priests of neighboring parishes in Jessup and Bowie. The Rev. G. A. Spiesberger, of St. Lawrence Church in Jessup, and the Rev. George J. Larkin, of Ascension Church in Bowie, participated in the service.

The vault containing the charred bodies of the seven victims was placed over the grave during the morning yesterday. And for several hours, townsmen and neighbors of the Lammers visited it to pay their respects. Many of them withstood the heat of a midsummer noon's sun to be with the family when time for the funeral came.

The Lammerses arrived together. The elderly father and mother led the way around the church yard to the cemetery—their faces steeled against the duty that lay before them. They looked rigidly ahead—and the tall, gaunt father seemed to have his eyes fixed on a point far beyond and over the scene of sorrow immediately before the procession.

Another Mother.

Behind the parents came another grief-stricken mother, Mrs. Michael Manning, a daughter, whose 7-year-old son, David, lost his life in the mass burning. Dressed in white, she leaned heavily on the arm of her brother, George Lammers. Then came Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Baldwin, relatives, whose son, Francis, 14, was a member of the Thursday night party.

Other surviving members of the family followed: Cecilia, in whose car the seven rode; Lawrence, Joseph, Frank, August and John. And with them were nearly a score of young relatives, most of whom had been chums with those who died.

The seven, buried together as they had died, were Pauline Lammers, 29; Bernard Lammers, 21; Mildred Lammers, 19; Anna May Lammers, 13 (all brothers and sisters); Francis Haker, 17, a cousin; Francis Baldwin, 14, a step-grandchild, and David Manning, 7, a grandchild.

E. M. King, driver of the truck that collided with the Lammers car, will be brought before a coroner's inquest tonight in Upper Marlborough. States Attorney Alan Bowie said last night.

Paris Reveals Huge Spy Ring On Frontiers

Arrest of Aviator Uncovers Alleged German-Italian Espionage.

By the United Press.

Paris, July 25.—A network of German and Italian spies along France's frontiers was revealed tonight with the arrest of a French amateur aviator, and newspaper reports that Fascist agents are penetrating Mediterranean ports.

The aviator, Jean Sellier, was charged with divulging military secrets to Germany following his arrest at Pailly after months of surveillance. He was transferred to Chaumont for questioning by counter-espionage agents of the famous "Deuxieme Bureau" of the war office.

The leftist newspaper Ce Soir reported the existence of a band of spies reporting to the Spainish rebels, as well as Rome and Berlin, on the movement of French ships and persons between France and Spain.

Evidence Seized.

A search of Sellier's home yielded much evidence, including a list of names of German aviators who, Sellier said, were friends of his.

Authorities seized correspondence with the German consul at Brussels, a collection of aerial photographs and maps of the Italian and Swiss frontier regions with certain airdromes marked off, eight expensive photographic units, and development apparatus of German origin.

In addition, they found an arsenal of Remington rifles, automatic pistols and merchandise which Sellier apparently smuggled into France from Germany as a sideline.

Aviator Long Watched.

The surveillance of Sellier began months ago when it was discovered he was making frequent trips to Germany, although as long ago as 1935 the record showed he went to Cologne with a false passport and was in touch with German aviators. For some reason he was unmolested upon his return.

Counter-espionage agents, following leads from Selliers' arrest, discovered evidence they believe may result in the revelation of espionage centers in Metz and other eastern cities.

According to Ce Soir, the border espionage system extends from Biarritz along the Pyrenees to Cerbere, on the Mediterranean, and as far as the Franco-Italian frontier. Daily reports in code, it said, were sent from a hundred agents.

Norris Forecasts Judiciary Reform

Waupaca, Wis., July 25 (AP).—Sen. George W. Norris, Nebraska Progressive, said today he was surprised at the "70-20" vote by which President Roosevelt's court bill was returned to the Senate Judiciary Committee, but added he believed there was a definite understanding that some judiciary reform measure would be enacted before the present session ended.

Senator Norris and his wife are living at their summer home at Waupaca Chain-o-Lakes while he is recouping his health. He said he felt better.

Concerning a report that Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Wisconsin Progressive, might be considered for the supreme bench, the Nebraskan said Senator LaFollette was too valuable a member of the Senate to be spared.

'Test Life' Set For 4 Freed in Scottsboro Case

Rehabilitation in New York to Be Supervised by Liebowitz.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 25.—Free for the first time in more than six years, four 'teen age colored "survivors" of the famous "Scottsboro case" left for New York tonight, to become subjects in a unique experiment in social rehabilitation.

Samuel S. Leibowitz, New York criminal lawyer, chief defense counsel for nine youths originally accused, traveled with them and paused to condemn what he termed "Alabama justice," that committed the other five.

Case Not Ended.

"Just why they were convicted is a question for Alabama to decide," he declared. "Justice has not been done and we're not through with this case so far as it involves those other five boys."

He declined to divulge his plans.

The four in his party enjoyed baths "with the first soap we've had in more'n two weeks," one said, and with something more than prison fare to eat, whiled away two hours in a colored neighborhood motion-picture theater.

Ironically, the films exhibted were, "Woman in Dsitres" and "Victims of Circumstance"—subjects significant considering the history of the case, which was based on the accusations of two white women mill workers.

"Too Dazed" to Talk

The four, Eugene Williams, Roy Wright, light-skinned Willie Robertson and bespectacled Olen Montgomery, were "too dazed," they said, to say much about their new-found freedom.

Leibowitz said, "The boys just can't be turned loose," after nearly 6½ years in jail, and declared he hoped they would be "placed in some vocational school where they could learn a trade."

Another member of the party said they probably would become "wards of some sort" of the American Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Big Welcome Missed.

New York, July 25 (AP).—Three thousand colored men and women packed Pennsylvania station today to welcome four Scottsboro case defendants, freed after more than six years in jail.

Women in flowered, vivid dresses, and men in colored shirts and sport costumes jammed the station until they learned the defendants would not arrive until tomorrow morning.

Dr. Hrdlicka Finds Prehistoric House

Seward, Alaska, July 25 (AP).—Discovery of the largest barabara (prehistoric native communal house) ever found in Alaska was announced today by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, of Washington, famous anthropologist.

A mail boat brought word Hrdlicka and his party uncovered the barabara—200 feet long and 100 feet wide—4 feet underground at Chernofski, native village on Unalaska Island.

The structure was heavily timbered and roofed with sod. It contained many wood and bone artifacts and a scattering of human bones.

Two Sisters and Man Killed When Trapped on Rail Trestle

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 25.—A family berry-picking expedition ended in tragedy today when two sisters and a brother-in-law of one of the women were trapped and killed on a Frisco Railway trestle 20 miles south of here.

Two youthful sons of the dead women narrowly escaped death by racing off the trestle in front of the passenger train.

The dead:

Mrs. Joseph Brown, 46, St. Louis.

Mrs. John Wolff, 34, St. Louis.

Jack Brown, 38, St. Louis.

Eddie Wolff, 22-year-old son of Mrs. Wolff, saved himself by clinging to the end of a tie as the train sped by. The bodies of his mother, aunt and uncle were thrown to the bank of a creek 30 feet below.

Eugene Brown, 11, son of Mrs. Brown, ran off the end of the trestle to safety.

The youths told Justice of the Peace C. H. Clements that Brown lost his life when he stopped to assist Mrs. Brown, who fell between the ties as she was running for her life. The boys described the trestle as being about 300 feet long.

Clements said the youths told him they did not hear the train whistle, and did not see it until it was almost upon them.

Members of the train crew notified officers at Ten Brook, a small community near where the tragedy occurred. The train, after a 30-minute delay, proceeded on its southward run.

Coroner A. E. Frazier said an inquest wil be held tomorrow.

The party left St. Louis early today. Their pails and baskets filled, the party decided to try their luck on the other side of the creek along which they had been working. The trestle was their only means of crossing at this point.

Prince Georges Official Asks Road Widening Where 7 Died

Whole-hearted support of the campaign to widen the Robert Crain highway, scene of the crash which killed seven youthful members of a Laurel, Md., family, was promised yesterday by Perry Boswell, president of the Prince Georges County board of commissioners.

Boswell declared he would urge the commissioners at their meeting tomorrow to indorse the proposed widening project.

"The county, itself, cannot improve the road," he said, "because it's a State highway.

"Even before the accident, the need for a wider road was apparent. The tragedy has served to impress it upon our minds.

"A 15-foot pavement is too narrow under almost any circumstances, but when a road is traveled by large buses and trucks, as is the Crain highway, it is even more imperative that something be done to correct the condition."

Boswell's statement followed the announcement by Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, that he would exert every effort to have shoulders constructed on the highway. The senator declared that Crain highway was the only heavily traveled interstate highway he knew of that did not have concrete shoulders. The road is used extensively by buses travelling from Norfolk to Baltimore and by trucks carrying produce from the South to Philadelphia and New York.

Worse than the Defense highway tragedy two years ago, in which five persons, including three nuns were killed, was the way police and rescue squad workers described the flames, which enveloped the automobile, trapping six inside and fatally burning the seventh.

Pointing to the extensive efforts to widen Defense Highway that followed the death of the nuns and two friends, Capt. Vinton D. Cockey, another county commissioner, said:

"The complaint with the Defense highway was that it was too narrow to accommodate the traffic. Actual measurements, however, show that it is 20 feet wide, 5 feet greater than the Crain highway measures at the scene of the accident."

Two separate appropriations were voted by the State Legislature for the construction of Crain highway. Under the first appropriation, made about 1920, the road was constructed from Batimore as far south as the intersection of the Mitchellville road, about 8 miles north of Upper Marlboro. This entire stretch is only 15 feet wide.

The second section of the road, from the intersection of the Mitchellville road to the Southern Maryland pike at T. B., was opened in 1927. A proportionately larger appropriation enabled engineers to add an edditional 3 feet to the width.

Residents declare that the entire stretch of road should be at least 18 feet, if not more.

18 Taken, 10 Swim Off In Raid on Dice Game

Weymouth, Mass., July 25 (AP).—Proficiency in swimming rather than in throwing dice became a matter of first importance to 28 men today when six State police officers raided a dice game near Whitman Pond.

Police arrested 18, but 10 others, fully clad, dived into the pond and swam to the opposite shore. The 18 arrested will be arraigned in Quincy District Court tomorrow.

Berry Picker Uncovers Garroted Man's Body

St. Laurent, Quebec, July 25 (Canadian Press).—A hand protruding grotesquely above a pile of rocks led a blueberry picker today to the body of Hyacinthe Cote, 67, contractor.

A handkerchief was found knotted about his throat and his hands were tied behind his back. He had been robbed.

Congress Urged By La Follette To Finish Work

Demand Made Following Trip Down Bay With Roosevelt.

added. If the committee decides not to include his provision, Borah said he expected committee approval of the judicial bill without delay.

Borah predicted Congress will adjourn about August 20.

Regardless of the results of the yacht conferences, the week ahead promises to be a fairly full one for the Senate. The McCarran bill to limit the length of freight trains is up for first consideration. It will be followed by the Black-Connery labor standards bill. Leaders predict this will be disposed of Tuesday or Wednesday.

Housing Bill Next.

The Wagner housing bill is next, if the Judiciary Committee functions as it intends, it will report out a revised court bill by Friday or Saturday. It will be a much-modified substitute for the Roosevelt reorganization plan, divorced of any proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court.

The House, while awaiting Senate action on the larger issues, today will resume consideration of a bill establishing administrative machinery for Bonneville dam. Before the week is over the house is expected to take up one phase of the President's Government reorganization program, addition of six $10,000-a-year assistants for the President.

The Miller-Tydings maintenance bill is on the House calendar for Tuesday. It is designed to effectuate State laws permitting manufacturers of trade-marked merchandise to fix minimum retail prices. The Senate already has approved it, as a rider to a District taxation bill.

Committees Hard at Work.

Committees will be active in both Houses. The Senate Judiciary Committee has scheduled a session today to continue drafting the new court bill. The joint committee on reorganization will convene today or tomorrow to elect a chairman to succeed the late Senator Robinson. Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, is considered the probable choice.

The Joint Committee on Tax evasion and avoidance today will resume discussion of domestic personal holding companies. Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, a member, expressed belief that some sort of legislation will be passed to close the loopholes before the session ends. No bill has been drafted, however.

Wage and hour legislation will receive final consideration of the House Labor Committee. Chairman Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, said a bill may be reported by the end of the week.

Republicans continued to demand that Congress go home. Senator McNary, of Oregon, minority leader, said he would leave for home August 5, and predicted adjournment by that time. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, demanded that Congress "quit," asserting that members had "reached the point of exhaustion."

Farm Prospects Dim.

Prospects were not bright for enactment of the type of farm legislation sought by President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace. They have proposed combining production control with regulation of surpluses, the latter by means of "ever-normal" granary.

Chairman Smith of the Senate Agriculture Committee has said he does not expect such a bill to be enacted at this session. Chairman Jones of the House committee said it might be passed if Congress stayed until the end of September.

"We can't throw something together and pass it," Jones said. "There is a lot of difference of opinion."

A group of House Democrats want a caucus to discuss Administration objectives, with a view to translating them all into legislation at the present session. McFarlane (Democrat), Texas, said he will present a caucus petition today to the caucus chairman, Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina. The petition has 50 signers.

"If we are going to do this job, we've got to do it now," McFarlane said. "Next year is an election year, and many members will want to get away in March or April."

Jean Tenney, New National Women's Archery Champion, Exhibits Her Skill to District Enthusiasts at Polo Grounds

Maryland Girl, Considered 'Dark Horse' in Lancaster Tournament, Surprised at Victory; Took Up Sport Two Years Ago, Winning State and Old Dominion Titles After Two Months of Practice.

Her laurels unfaded and the smile of victory still on her lips, Miss Jean Ainsworth Tenney, new national women's archery champion, gave an exhibition of her skill yesterday at the Polo Grounds. The 23-year-old prodigy of the bow and arrows has just returned from the fifty-seventh target session of the National Archery Association in Lancaster, Pa. She leaves today for her home, Clear Springs, Md.

Considered the "dark horse" of the tournament, Miss Tenney admits that she was more surprised than anyone to learn that she had won the championship. She was competing with veterans of the sport, and her experience as an archer can be measured in months.

She took up the sport in 1935 and since then has practiced only during the summers. A physical education teacher by profession, she had just a month after the closing of school in which to brush up on her form for the recent tournament.

Miss Tenney's father was responsible for her taking up the sport in the first place. He has not been at it long enough to teach her, however, so all she knows is what she has learned from books on the subject, practice and observation of crack archers.

Father and daughter form an unusual partnership. He is interested chiefly in archery equipment, so he buys the bows and arrows and she wins the championships.

The arrangement has worked brilliantly so far. In 1935, only two months after Miss Tenney had strung her first bow, she carried off the Maryland State championship. The same summer she became Old Dominion champion, defeating contestants from Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia.

She won the Old Dominion tournament again in 1936, and will defend her title late this summer, when the event is to be held in Washington.

Miss Tenney enjoys archery, she says, because it takes "skill rather than brawn." Also, the sport is not cluttered up with professionals, out for material gain rather than sheer love of archery. She fears that the professional element ultimately will creep in, but in the meantime the only archers one encounters on the target ranges are "true sportsmen."

Yesterday's show was sponsored by the Potomac Archers, the local archery organization. The other big feature was Mrs. Gladys Hammer, of Terre Haute, Ind., last year's national women's champion. Miss Tenney won the exhibition round but feels that neither she nor Mrs. Hammer was in top form.

Graduated from William and Mary in 1936, Miss Tenney taught last year in a Cumberland junior high school. This year she will be on the staff of a Hagerstown senior high school. She is a member of the Oriole Archers in Baltimore.

In one respect it is too bad that Miss Tenney became national women's champion so young. There are now no more heights for her to achieve. Women archers do not compete with men, and American archers do not compete with those of other countries. So she will just have to string along with her present title, each year outshooting anyone that tries to take it from her.

Mrs. Wilson Heads Purcellville Club

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Purcellville, Va., July 25.—Mrs. Franklin P. Wilson, of Washington and Purcellville, was elected president of the Purcellville Garden Club here yesterday afternoon. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Mrs. Otis L. Williams, of Round Hill; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harvey Arthur, of Paeonian Springs; recording secretary, Mrs. Jennings Potts, of Lincoln; treasurer, Miss Louise Goodrich, of Purcellville, and historian and librarian, Miss Maria Copeland, of Round Hill.

The Kenworthy Bowl, awarded for the most artistic arrangement during the year, was won by Mrs. Howard M. Hoge, who captured four blues in this class. Mrs. Hoge waived her right to this trophy and it was awarded jointly to Mrs. J. S. Patterson, Miss Mary Simpson and Miss Dorothy Smith, each having won three blues during the year. Each will hold the bowl four months.

Mrs. Mary V. Smith, retiring president of the club, having won 17 points in exhibits during the year, was awarded the club trophy. Mrs. Hoge also won 17 points, but was not eligible as she was last year's winner.

Winners in exhibits were: Miniature—Miss Mary Simpson, Miss Dorothy Smith and Mrs. Horace Gregg; white flowers in black containers—Mrs. Howard Rogers, Miss Smith, Miss Simpson; Kenworthy arrangement—Mrs. J. F. Potts, Miss Caroline T. Pancoast and Mrs. J. P. Hatcher.

Interesting reports of the year's activities were read at the meeting, which was held at the Courtney Inn with Mrs. A. W. Hoopes and Mrs. Grace B. Popkins, joint hostesses.

MacWhite, Irish Envoy, Is 'Greatly Improved'

Michael MacWhite, minister from the Irish Free State, who was rushed to Emergency Hospital Friday when he was believed in danger of pneumonia, was reported in greatly improved condition last night.

Dr. Harry Kaufman said MacWhite's condition was encouraging, and that his illness was simply a severe cold.

Mayor of N. Y. Urged to Enter As Independent

LaGuardia Ponders Advice to Spurn Republican Nomination.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25.—While this city's muddled mayoralty situation showed no signs of clearing over the week-end, the New York Times said Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia was weighing advice from members of his strategy board to spurn a Republican nomination and make the re-election fight in November as an independent.

LaGuardia was represented as skeptical of the good faith of Republican county leaders, even if they should promise him support in a primary struggle with Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, Tammany candidate, who has expressed willingness to run also for the Republican nomination.

As viewed by the LaGuardia tactical staff, a reverse for the mayor at the hands of Copeland in a Republican primary would be damaging, while not necessarily fatal, to his hopes of re-election.

LaGuardia Hopeful.

It is known there is much opposition to LaGuardia among "regular" Republicans.

With the mass of American labor party voters as a nucleus, and the vigorous support of the citizens nonpartisan committee, the city fusion party, and other independent groups already assured him, LaGuardia—last week an admitted candidate "on all tickets"—is said to view favorably his chances of victory in the november election.

A decision on his part to run as an independent would complicate still further a political situation which promises one of the most bitterly contested New York City mayoralty elections in years.

Whalen Opposes Copeland.

Contesting the Democratic nomination with Senator Copeland is Grover Whalen, president of the New York World's Fair Commission and choice of four pro-Roosevelt county leaders battling Tammany.

In statements and interviews, Copeland has already showed eagerness to make his opposition to the New Deal the issue on which he would fight out the campaign.

What would be the result of a three-cornered general election, with LaGuardia and Whalen splitting the New Deal vote and Copeland garnering the support of the Republicans and conservative Democrats, was today the subject of speculation.

10,000-ton cruisers. Visible on the ways nearby was the pre-war battleship Doria, 22,555 tons, undergoing thorough modernization.

Some time next year Italy hopes to have in commission the Vittorio Veneto—which will take a year or more to complete—and a sister ship in addition to four modernized battleships of the Doria class. This will give Italy a formidable force in the Mediterranean and the seas beyond.

The Vittorio Veneto's sister ship Littorio is to be launched at Genoa probably on October 28, fifteenth anniversary of the day fascism seized power in Italy.

Work on these ships is far ahead of schedule. Observers pointed to the succession of Mediterranean crises involving Britain and Italy as a reason.

It has been authoritatively indicated that another 35,000-ton battleship will be laid down this year in the slip just vacated by the Vittorio Veneto, with a fourth to follow as soon as the Vittorio has taken the water.

Italian naval officers believe that on her completion the Vittorio Veneto will be the most powerful warship afloat. She will carry nine 15-inch guns, 12 6-inch guns and smaller armament and is designed for a speed of more than 30 knots.

Another young Baltimorean, Eugene Brown, 19, was drowned while swimming at Crystal Beach near Riveria Beach. Oxygen tanks and artificial respiration failed to revive him and he was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital at Annapolis, Md.

A check-up of nearby beaches and resorts revealed an attendance of record crowds as the mercury registered 2 degrees higher than Saturday's peak of 90. In spite of yesterday's scorcher, no heat prostrations were reported in the District, and Maryland and Virginia State police reported no serious auto accidents on the heavily traveled highways.

With the thermometer registering 87 at 7 p. m. last night, the Weather Bureau predicted relief for today and forecast showers and possible thunderstorms accompanied by a decided drop in temperature.

Vivian Burnett Heads Rescue, Dies on Boat

'Lord Fauntleroy' Original Was Newspaperman Here.

It was shortly after that the illness felled him. He was 61.

Burnett, a newspaper and magazine writer in the "muckraking days" when McClure's Magazine was in the ascendant, often commented ruefully on the "Little Lord Fauntleroy" characterization which, he felt, dogged him through life.

He was a sophomore at Harvard when his mother revealed in a magazine article she had built her conception of the "perfect little boy" about her second son.

To live down his reputation, Vivian Burnett went out for the track team and took an active part in college sports. Following his graduation he went to Denver, Colo., and became a reporter on the Denver Republican.

He later was a columnist on the Washington Times, and distinguished himself as a roving reporter for McClure's.

Burnett was born in Paris, April 5, 1876, and divided his early years between Europe and Washington, D. C. He wrote a biography of his mother in 1927, entitled "The Romantic Lady."

Two Are Killed, Girl Is Injured In Triple Crash

G. D. Hill, of Washington, and Wife Dead in Wreck at Powhatan, Va.

A Washington man and his wife were killed, and their daughter seriously injured, in a three way collision, near Powhatan, Va., last night, it was learned here from Richmond police.

The dead were George D. Hill, engineer employed at Bolling Field, and his wife, Elsie Hill. Their daughter, Margery Hill, 16, was in serious condition at Memorial Hospital in Richmond. Their Washington home was at 321 B street southeast.

Friends here said Mr. Hill was bringing his wife and daughter home from their vacation. The body of Mr. Hill was taken to Garrett's funeral home in Powhatan. Mrs. Hill was dead on arrival at Johnston Willis Hospital in Richmond and her body was removed to Sweeney's funeral home there.

West of Richmond.

Powhatan, where the accident occurred, is 25 miles west of Richmond.

Earlier, in Washington traffic claimed its sixty-second victim this year when Arthur Oscar Fowler, 58, 1826 New Hampshire avenue northwest, died in Casualty Hospital.

Fowler suffered a fractured skull in a two-car collision last Tuesday in the 1900 block New York avenue northwest. Police said his automobile was in an accident with a car driven by Albert H. Fairley, 27, of Barrington, N. J. Fairley will appear at a coroner's inquest.

Mr. Fowler, who was manager of the Nehi Bottling Works, was making a "U" turn at the time of the accident, police said.

Mrs. Mary O'Connor, 31, 519 H street northwest, received bruises and minor cuts yesterday when she was knocked down by an automobile in front of her home. She was treated at Sibley Hospital.

Two Women Injured.

Two women were cut and bruised in a collision at Eighth and H streets northeast. At Casualty Hospital they gave their names as Mrs. Rosa Ferroni, 44, and Grace Didonic, 68, both of Philadelphia.

They were riding in a car operated by Joseph Ferroni, 23, who was charged with reckless driving at the Ninth Precinct. The other machine was driven by Edwin L. Williams, colored, 42, 4629 Deane avenue northeast.

Eight-year-old Mabel Austin, colored, 1440 D street southeast, escaped with minor lacerations when struck by a car at Fifteenth and D streets southeast. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

Lessie Hadley, colored, 24, 301 First street southwest, was seriously injured when the car in which she was riding ran off the road near Piscataway Creek, Md., yesterday. She was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a fractured skull, fractured right arm and jaw, and lacerations of head and face. A second passenger, Lillian McLean, colored, 20, 206 B street southwest, was treated at Casualty Hospital for minor injuries. The driver, Graham Green, 314 Virginia avenue southwest, was not injured.

Cab Driver Crashes.

Orville Brown, Washington cab driver, was critically injured when his cab crashed into the parked car of Officer Dave Crabill, Strasburg, yesterday afternoon, according to an Associated Press dispatch last night. Floyd Brown, brother of the driver and owner of the cab, was riding with him, but was less seriously injured. Both are in a Winchester hospital.

Death Stops Julius Brittlebank On 18th Trip Around World

Julius Brittlebank, 79, known as America's Marco Polo, died yesterday in Honolulu on the first leg of what would have been his eighteenth trip around the world.

A tall, slight man with great charm, Brittlebank was a retired cotton and grain broker of Charleston, S. C. When not globe-trotting, he spent most of his time on a farm near Middleburg, Va., and was well-known in Washington. His son, Frank Brittlebank, lives with his wife at 3228 Hiatt place northwest.

The elder Brittlebank made his first trip around the world in 1911. In 1920 he set out to make globe-girdling an annual event. He was on the President Polk of the Dollar Line when he was seized with a "fluttering heart" Saturday. He was removed to Queen's Hospital in Honolulu and there he died.

"I haven't missed anything in 70 years," he used to tell newspapermen here. "I saw the end of the Civil War, and I remember Grant distinctly. I saw the China rebellion and was caught in Hamburg when the World War broke out. And I left Cuba just before the Spanish-American War started."

Brittlebank, who was born in Terre Haute, Ind., went into business as a broker after leaving school at the age of 15. He had accumulated a fortune in Charleston 31 years ago, and decided then to do some serious traveling. One story was that he got the travel fever while courting Fanny Simpson, a Virginia girl, who later became his wife. She died a year ago last March.

Somebody once estimated that Brittlebank had traveled more than 2,000,000 miles in his globe-trotting, but he himself never bothered to keep any records of that kind.

Of all the places he visited, the genial old traveler liked Italy best.

"There is so much to see," he would explain, "so much more than any other country of that size: The theater in Milan, art in Florence, water in Venice. And just think of all the great men Italy has given the world, Marconi, Michelangelo, Caruso and Mussolini."

Brittlebank was a Democrat, but he was somewhat alarmed toward the end by President Roosevelt's spending policy.

Westbrook Pegler is back from his vacation. His column "Fair Enough" will appear in its usual place in The Post tomorrow.

Rep. Shannon Gives House Pages Annual Feast

House Page Boys Have Banquet As Guests of Rep. J. B. Shannon

Mayflower Dinner Also a Victory Celebration for Defeat of Senate Baseball Team by a Score of 8 to 0.

Page boys of the House of Representatives gathered in the Mayflower Hotel last night for their annual banquet as guests of Joseph B. Shannon, Democratic Representative from Missouri.

In part, it was a victory dinner. The preceding day their star pitcher, "Hickory" Hill, of North Carolina, led the House pages baseball team to a 8-0 victory over the Senate pages, allowing exactly one hit.

The more than 40 pages were jubilant about that, but more important they were hungry and very grateful to Representative Shannon for the banquet. The pages brought their own speakers, and each speech was partly a statement of gratitude to their host.

Following the period of contented silence, while they attacked Maryland chicken, ice cream, etc., the gathering swung into relaxed parliamentary proceedings, under the easy hand of their chief page and toastmaster, John McCabe.

Speak With Experience.

Page after page rose to speak in the manner of some favored House leader, swinging into action with the poise and decision built up through day after day of Congressional experience. Some proved themselves masters of the jibe indirect. Others wandered from the subject with great dignity.

William Paul (Democrat), California, was called on to discuss "The Workings of Congress," and twisted his subject into a detailed analysis of the Golden Gate Bridge over San Francisco Bay, with specific data on its length, height, and position as one of the main wonders of the world.

James Neal Peterson (Democrat), Georgia, discussed the weather, prophesied that it was "fairin' off." Antonio Suazo (Democrat), New Mexico, baffled the audience by recounting the story of the three little bears in Spanish, complete with deep-voiced Spanish papa bear, medium-voiced Spanish mama bear, and squeaky Spanish baby bear.

Talks of Work.

Ryder Ray (Democrat), New York, touched briefly on the work of the pages, stated that on a conservative estimate the staff of 48 pages had distributed some 36,000 packages so far this year.

Earl Morgan (Democrat), Alabama, one of the youngest pages in the group, 13 years old, recited a poem of his own composition, prophesying a brilliant future for the Nation and his companions when they came to sit where they now run.

The party broke up in a huddle around Representative Shannon, with the crowd joining in "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

W. Va. Firefighters Gather at Thomas

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 25.—The West Virginia Volunteer Firemen's Association, after a week of worrying about a place for its meeting next month, today had an invitation, from Thomas, and accepted it.

C. F. Reininger, of Charles Town, president, said he was advised by Charleston, State capital, which had asked and been given the convention at the 1936 meeting here, that it would be practically impossible to entertain the firemen this year. He immediately sought a fill-in—and Thomas produced an invitation. He and other association officials were in Thomas over the week-end to fix a date. Reininger said yesterday the date probably would have to be deferred from the usual August to a September period because of the last-minute complication.

Local firemen announced today the Cumberland Valley Volunteer Firemen's Association, with which departments in towns from Winchester, Va., to Harrisburg, Pa., long have been identified, will be held August 11 and 12 in Mechanicsburg, Pa. Local companies will participate. Last year the West Virginia and Cumberland Valley conventions were held on successive days, both in this city.

Claud Spreckels' $20 Estate Closed

San Diego, Calif., July 25 (AP).—The estate of Claud Spreckels, sr., whose wealth dwindled from millions to a truck worth $20, was recorded as settled today. Superior Judge Gordon Thompson signed the decree of final settlement, but it did not disclose what became of the truck.

When Spreckels, member of the pioneer California sugar family, possessed millions, he created a trust fund for his widow and four children, who enjoy its income.

Various reverses depleted his wealth, and shortly before his death five years ago he became bankrupt. The estate was divided among creditors until only a "four-cylinder truck, not in condition to operate, $20" remained.

Spreckels was the son of John D. Spreckels, pioneer financier.

Operatic Program Set Tomorrow by Arts Club

The Arts Club will hold its annual midsummer event tomorrow night with the presentation of an operatic program by Estelle Wentworth and her opera group. The program will include "An Opera Rehearsal" and the one act operetta "Trial by Jury."

A second event will be held Thursday night featuring a preview performance of "Pyramaus and Thisbe," presented by the Washington Players. Both will be given in the club's garden at 2017 I street.

Milkman Trips, Falls on Bottles; Condition Serious

Clifton R. Kirby, 25, of 1609 Trinidad avenue northeast, was injured seriously early yesterday when he tripped over a wicket fence and fell on several milk bottles.

Kirby, employed by Thompson's Dairy, was delivering milk in the 4600 block Forty-third street northwest, when he fell. Several empty bottles he was carrying smashed, inflicting severe cuts on his arm.

He was found unconscious on the sidewalk by a passerby who called police. At Emergency Hospital, physicians said the tendons in Kirby's right arm had been severed and that he had lost a great quantity of blood. They said his condition is serious.

4-H Awards Made.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 25.—Ruth Simmons, of Morgan County, and Anna Smith, of Berkeley County, received the ranking "gold and blue" awards for outstanding older 4-H Club members at the annual Tri-County 4-H Fair held at Camp Frame, near here, which closed yesterday. The recognition involves regular attendance upon camps and completion of good all-round work during the year.

Historic Church Gets $5,000 Gift

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 25.—Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church at St. Marys City, built on the historic site of Maryland's first capital and surrounded by a graveyard which includes the spot where Calvert made his settlement in 1634, has received a gift of $5,000 from Mrs. Harry Scott Wherritt, wife of the president of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. of Pittsburgh.

The money will be used for repairs to the church which is built of bricks used in the original State house, and is now covered with ivy, and is really a shrine to the thousands of visitors who come to see where Maryland had its beginning, on the banks of the St. Mary's River. The picturesque edifice contains many relics of the colonial life of the parish, and its vestries on down through the years has preserved the churchyard, which contains many monuments erected by societies to mark historical spots there. Also one of Maryland's colonial governors, Sir Lionel Copley and Lady Copley are buried there and many other noted Marylanders.

Mr. and Mrs. Wherritt have an estate near St. Marys City.

Barytone Plans Benefit.

Easton, Md., July 25 (AP).—John Charles Thomas, noted barytone, will give his annual benefit concert here on October 10 in behalf of the Emergency Hospital.

The Scottsboro Case.

Dispatches describing Alabama's abrupt action in freeing four of the nine "Scottsboro boys" suggest that the books on the case may now be closed. It is predicted from Decatur that if no appeals are made in behalf of the other five Negroes, the Governor will commute at least the single death sentence now standing.

Undoubtedly most of Alabama hopes for just this. The six-and-a-half-year rape trial has done little to enhance the State's reputation. On the contrary, mention today of the name of Alabama raises all manner of unpleasant thoughts of injustice, blind prejudice and abject social failure. Ten times Alabama prosecutors rose in court with only the word of a female tramp to justify their demand for the lives of nine Negroes. Ten times Alabama juries acceded to the request, closing their eyes narrowly not only to competent medical testimony but—most important—to the oath of one of the women involved that the whole story of the attack on them was "framed."

A more evident miscarriage of justice the Nation has rarely witnessed. Yet Alabama persisted in it until last week when, apparently, even its stomach turned and it sought to find a way out of the disgrace by canceling the charges against the last four boys scheduled for retrial. Much as the whole country, too, would like to forget the unpleasant affair, the books should not be closed with only this. Partial justice is almost as bad as none.

Alabama has at last admitted that there is no case against four of the indicted Negroes; what about the other five whose retrials have already been finished? Are they not eligible for rehearings in the light of the State's sudden change of mind? The organizations and individuals who have been defending the Negroes have let it be known they will fight the conviction of the five "to hell and back."

Alabama's shame is the Nation's shame. Some little redemption was achieved when, after the Federal Supreme Court had set aside the death verdicts because only white men had been called for jury duty, Alabama admitted its error and ordered Negroes listed as veniremen. But more than this is needed. Only a complete review of the cases of the five convicted Negroes, conducted in the fullest spirit of honesty and fair play, will restore the injuries done American justice by the long, sickening years of the Scottsboro trial.

Great Dogs.

Out of the Canadian Northwest a few years ago appeared a dog named "Chinook." He was a hybrid—part Samoyede, part Malamute, part St. Bernard. Combining the best features of all, he showed a high resistance to cold and ice, a wolf's courage and stamina, and a tremendous physique. Admiral Byrd chose him for lead-dog of the first Antarctic expedition and so outstanding was "Chinook's" performance that he was used to start a new breed which today bears his name.

A thousand years ago, high in the St. Bernard Pass of the Swiss Alps, a similar new strain was established by a fortunate cross of a German boarhound (itself commingling mastiff and greyhound blood) with a rough-coated Swiss sheep dog. But unlike the Chinooks, the St. Bernards had to wait nearly 800 years for a great champion. His name was "Bari" and he it was who, with a cask of food and restoratives strapped under his neck, gave the world early in the nineteenth century its picture of the St. Bernard fighting through drifts to rescue a snowbound wayfarer.

Others before him had done as much, of course, but none with such regularity or eclat. Since his day, the pass has been tunneled and traffic over the old route during the winter has dwindled to nothing. The past decade has seen no St. Bernard dog credited with saving a life.

On the contrary, one of the dogs in the monastery of SS. Maurice and Lazarus recently attacked and killed a little girl. Her father's demand that the whole kennel be dispersed has stirred up a great controversy. Thousands of letters have been received by the monks, pleading that all St. Bernards should not be condemned because of the viciousness of one. This is touching but far from surprising evidence of the world's general appreciation of the dog's unique loyalty and the affection this friend of man has engendered.

It is altogether appropriate, too, that these appreciations should be directed to the St. Bernard monastery. For in its halls, the great St. Bernard de Menthon himself first and best epitomized man's regard for the dog. Said he in one of his twelfth century sermons: "Who loves me will love my dog also."

The Chamber And The NLRB.

It is not surprising that the Chamber of Commerce of the United States should find that the decisions of the National Labor Relations Board "have not yet provided definite and consistent interpretations of the (Wagner) act which will enable employers to understand clearly the extent of their obligations and their rights under the act." For that matter business men are still in doubt as to the precise nature of their rights and duties under the Federal anti-trust laws after years of subjection to the prohibitions of those laws.

Regulatory legislation of this type can never be precise as to meaning and rigidly consistent in interpretation because of the varied and rapidly-changing industrial conditions under which it is applied. The vague and obscure provisions of the Wagner act in particular compel the NLRB to exercise wide discretion in interpreting the law in order to enforce it. The board faces a very difficult task in exploring new ground without precedents to guide it. Moreover, since the Supreme Court upheld the Wagner act, it has been overwhelmed by a floodtide of complaints.

The Chamber of Commerce report states that over 1,500 cases are pending, including the important ones growing out of the recent steel strike. A large proportion of these cases will undoubtedly be withdrawn, dismissed, or settled by agreement before reaching the stage at which formal decisions are handed down. It is these formal decisions of the NLRB that have come under the critical scrutiny of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. In some cases the evidence seems to support charges of inconsistency, although full possession of the facts might change the verdict. In other cases, the board's apparent inconsistency is clearly traceable to the character of the problems presented to it.

That is well shown in decisions relating to the proper unit for collective bargaining purposes. On one occasion the NLRB held that a single plant should be the unit. In another case, all six plants under one employer were recognized as the proper bargaining unit. In still other cases, several bargaining units have been recognized within a single plant. These decisions may leave the employer rather bewildered, but it does not follow that they are arbitrary or inconsistent with one another. They are based, indeed, upon a variety of factors that have to be considered in determining how best to further collective bargaining in each individual instance.

If the Wagner act were amended—as it should be—to make the NLRB a referee between industrial managements and workers instead of a guardian of labor's rights only, employers would be less suspicious, less disposed to criticize the rulings of the board. That changed attitude would of itself greatly assist enforcement of the law and make its uncertainties much less serious obstacles to progress.

Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady said in a recent address that "the mere declaration of the constitutionality of the Wagner labor act by the Supreme Court will not in itself create the state of mind which is essential to peaceful industrial relations. Industrial leaders with generations of a philosophy of individualism behind them, irrespective of how much they desire to adapt their policies to the requirements involved, cannot overnight adjust themselves to the new type of relationship that grows out of true collective bargaining."

Nevertheless, revision of the Wagner act to make it a two-way system of regulating employer-employe relationships would help to create a state of mind among employers favorable to co-operation with the Federal authorities who are charged with the task of making collective bargaining effective.

Protests Against Economy.

Issuance of an economy order by the SEC has brought an immediate protest from a union of its employes affiliated with the C. I. O. Objections of this sort are only natural and if properly timed and expressed in a restrained and discriminating manner, they are entirely legitimate. If this group wishes to make its advice effective, however, it will refrain from taking a stand against any and all forms of economy that place burdens upon the personnel.

There is no painless way of economizing. When the Government sets out to cut expenditures the greater part of the burden inevitably falls upon its employes. That is a hard, but inescapable fact and protests cannot alter the situation. The SEC appears to have gone about the work of retrenchment reasonably, since it does not propose to dismiss workers. The savings are to be effected by not filling vacancies and by suspending promotions. Other costs such as traveling expenses, supplies and equipment are to be kept at a minimum.

Undoubtedly this program imposes hardships upon those who have been looking forward to promotion. The failure to fill vacancies may also entail extra work for SEC employes. But such are the unfortunate consequences of having an unbalanced budget which makes a reduction in expenditures imperative. By crying out against so-called "false economy" before the effect of the proposed changes has been experienced, the union is likely to acquire a reputation for being opposed to all economy.

Obviously the union has too hastily set itself up in judgment against the executive heads who are trying to carry out the President's request for Government departments to save at least 10 per cent of their appropriations. The time for the union to intervene is when and if it becomes apparent that economies are resulting in overwork and impaired morale. If it can then be shown that employes are being exploited, there will be justification for charges of "false economy." Until then, judgment should be suspended.

Is China Giving Way?

After a fortnight of extreme tension, the Sino-Japanese crisis in North China shows some signs of easing.

Perhaps too much should not be made of appearances. The Chinese abhor a straight line and delight in a zigzag. What looks like a retreat by Nanking may simply mean that the Chinese government is sparring for time, the better to be able to muster its forces in opposition to the bullying Japanese.

It is nonetheless significant that during the past few days there has been no repetition of the armed clashes between Japanese and Chinese troops which seemed, not so very long ago, to be the prelude to war. And there has also been a notable absence of further rumors of large-scale Chinese troop movements from the Yangtze Valley north to the old capital.

The only troop movements which have excited any interest of late have been those of additional Japanese reinforcements landing at Tientsin and of Chinese regiments of the Thirty-seventh Division leaving the Peiping area. The latter is particularly significant since it indicates that the local Chinese authorities are capitulating to Japanese pressure.

To be sure, the Japanese insist this withdrawal of troops has not gone very far nor very fast, and that the soldiers sent out of the Peiping district have been replaced by newcomers. The fact that Gen. Sung Chehyuan, chairman of the Hopei-Chahar political council and commander of the Twenty-ninth Army, has seen fit to make even a slight concession to the Japanese demands is nevertheless important. For it suggests that Tokyo may have been telling the truth when it was stated there, some days ago, that a truce agreement has been made with Gen. Sung.

Withdrawal of the anti-Japanese Thirty-seventh Division was one of the conditions set down by the Tokyo government as the price of peace. The other demands are said to be: (1) the elimination of persons "impeding" Sino-Japanese relations; (2) the complete suppression of Communists in the Hopei-Chahar area, and (3) a stricter control of Japanese organizations and propaganda.

The net effect of the execution of these demands would be to make Japan the unquestioned master of Hopei and Chahar provinces. Not surprisingly, Nanking balks. Faced by the choice between submitting to the effective loss of its sovereignty in North China and a war in which the odds would be on the side of the Japanese, China may capitulate. But it is hardly likely to do so without at least putting up a show of resistance and without seeking to stave off the unpleasant prospect of the Hopei-Chahar area being transformed into another Manchukuo.

It is understandable, therefore, why close on the Japanese reports of the alleged capitulation of Gen. Sung, comes the information that Gen. Hsiung-pin, vice chief of the Chinese general staff, has arrived in North China and is seeking to rouse the flagging spirits of the Chinese military leaders in the Peiping district. The Sino-Japanese crisis is not yet over.

Example For Policemen.

A Mount Rainier policeman has turned in his badge rather than carry out the mayor's order to "take care of" a traffic ticket received by a friend of a town councilman.

That policeman should never have to go begging. Indeed, he might well consider for himself a career such as that of Lieut. F. M. Kreml, the traffic expert of Evanston, Ill., who rose from a private's rank to become a national highway safety consultant merely by applying common sense to the problems of automobile control. For the Mount Rainier officer, or former officer, has the sort of stamina that should be in great demand by traffic law enforcement agencies. The Capital, in particular, would do well to take his example to heart.

Washington's police, of course, have many other problems to cope with. The metropolitan department is understaffed, it is inadequately housed, and it is handicapped by a lack of co-ordination with the other two police agencies of the city. In addition to these difficulties, it is continually exposed to political pressure, or the possibility of pressure which is even more demoralizing. A particular case in point may be found in a collection of bills before a House District subcommittee.

These would restore to duty four local policemen dismissed during the past few years by the Police Board. That Congress should concern itself over such minor details of the Capital's administration is ridiculous and offensive. Far better that it turn its attention to supplying Washington with funds for adequate police protection. The Commissioners are fully competent to determine for the city all questions of police personnel. But that task is made especially difficult when they have to uphold the morale of the department against individual and group interferences on the part of Congressmen.

F. D. R.'s Smile.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of the interesting letters adorning these columns this morning, the center one signed "Pro Bono Publico"—a familiar pseudonym—merits a rebuke.

If Franklin D. Roosevelt's smiling countenance is distasteful to your correspondent, is it necessary by innuendo to asperse the great office of President? His letter states: "Lincoln did not smile." On the contrary, historians have recorded that the very human Civil War President frequently smiled and laughed uproariously over the letters of Petroleum V. Nasby.

As to what your correspondent asserts to the effect that "Mr. Roosevelt has created so much havoc in our lives, etc.," it is, indeed, a great discovery. The facts, if true, ought to be front-page news.

FIDES.

Washington, July 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your July 23 issue one who signs himself "Pro Bono Publico" criticizes President Roosevelt for—of all things—his smile! No doubt this critic would also scold the baby and think that daisies are good only to tread on.

Someone has said that no one is so much in need of a smile as the man who can no longer give one. Back in the dark days of '32 the whole United States was in need of a smile. And, egad, it got one! The courageous and contagious smile of President Roosevelt that lighted up every newspaper and movie screen did as much to save us from revolution as did any emergency legislation enacted on Capitol Hill.

He always has had his critics, but it was not surprising—or was it?—that in such places as beauty parlors and gasoline stations about the country recently I heard chatter about a "third term for Roosevelt." Someone else has said that the short cut to beauty is a happy face. And maybe the short cut to a third term is an infectious smile, the kind of a smile that puts faith in us—that teaches us religion because it proclaims more loudly than words that somehow, somewhere, there's still something to live for, by heck!

CLARA LOUISE LESLIE.

Washington, July 24.

A Summer Visitor?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to protest in the name of decency and good manners against the letter appearing in The Post of July 15 from E. P. G. under the title "Sen. Wheeler's Speech." I thoroughly concede to one and all the right to disagreement on political and other matters, but when it comes to being plainly rude and insulting, especially to the wife of our President, it is going beyond the bounds of decency and the publication of such letters reflects no credit on your great paper.

No wonder that E. P. G. signed only his initials; although he used a Virginia location from which to write, it is to be presumed that he was a summer visitor from some other State. He did not write like a Virginian.

ARTHUR D. WRIGHT.

Polarized Headlights.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Seven Die; Death Driver Blames Glaring Lights."

How long will this keep up? For how many years will we permit penny-pinching, smugness, intolerance of anything new, plain stupidity and all the other factors that contribute to a total disregard of safety, to control our highways?

Our cars are capable of 80 miles an hour sustained speed. Our drivers of 40. Our equipment of 20.

Blinding headlights cause as many accidents and deaths as any other cause except liquor. And how many liquor crashes have glaring lights as a contributory cause?

Science has provided us with safety glass. The car on Crain highway had it. Science has provided us with all steel bodies. That didn't help those seven. Science has provided us with a simple answer to glaring lights. Simple polarization screens.

Polarizing screens have the remarkable faculty of permitting control of light intensity. Applied to cars, a screen is fitted over each light with its axis inclined 45 degrees. All light emitted from these headlights is polarized in that plane. The driver wears polarizing goggles inclined in the same axial direction, or a screen fastened to the windshield, or the safety glass of the windshield is made with polarizing material. As the axes are parallel, the light from your own headlights passes through the screen into your eyes with only a slight reduction in intensity, BUT. The lights of approaching cars so equipped have their polarization axis at right angles to your own and to your goggles. These lights show as only a dim purple glow, yet the approaching car is bathed in your light and is completely visible to you. You are not blinded, neither is the other driver; both can see the road, can see the other's car and the passing can be made safely.

The one drawback is this—every car on the road must be equipped with polarizing screens to make it effective. Maryland should take the lead, with this horrible accident as an example, and require every car on its highways at night to be equipped with polarizing screens. Not only State cars but cars from other States as well. The cost? Roughly about $20 a car; about the same as safety glass. A monopoly? No. At least two manufacturers in this country manufacture polarizing screens in sizes large enough for headlights and windshield viewing screens.

A tremendous revenue to the manufacturers, of course. That's what usually stops us from adopting anything new. But what were these seven lives worth?

Roper's Antigambling Edict.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper is to be commended for the very laudable order to his employes prohibiting gambling and loaning of money. Shakespeare's gentle admonition, "neither a borrower nor a lender be," is as fresh today as when it was uttered centuries ago. If the great Bard could still express himself, he would no doubt include "nor a gambler be."

The tendency of modern life, especially youth, is toward the wide and open road, living beyond means, by hook or crook, which in the end is bound to lead to disaster, filling our jails and penitentiaries. The so-called New Deal is in a way responsible for such pernicious morality, because upon its inception it actually advocated "spend yourself into prosperity," "the less you work and produce (the farmer), the more you will have," etc., when plain common sense has always insisted that it cannot be done.

The good folks at home, all over the country, who have sons and daughters working for Uncle Sam, will call Secretary Roper's name blessed for this righteous step—if he sees that this order is carried out to the letter.

Interpretation Of The Irish Election

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "The Irish Election," forces us reluctantly to the conclusion that you are ill-informed as to Ireland and the Irish situation and that you really ought not in fairness as to the facts attempt a comment upon this subject.

You say that the new constitution establishing Ireland as a free, sovereign and independent nation was adopted by a "small majority." The fact is that there was a majority vote of about 150,000 for the constitution. To say that this majority was "small" in a total vote of this size is to be either oblivious of truth or determined to pervert it.

You say that President de Valera "is placed in an embarrasing position" because he did not win a clear majority in the Dail. Ought you not in fairness say that under the peculiar election system of Ireland it is extremely difficult, with four parties in the field and proportional representation, for any party to win a clear majority. In the election, Mr. de Valera's party obtained 591,638 votes in the country at large and the Cosgrave party, its chief competitor, obtained but 461,178 votes. If Ireland had the same election system that obtains in the United States, there would not be the least question as to the validity of Mr. de Valera's mandate, would there?

You say that the opposition headed by Mr. Cosgrave is "strong." In the Dail as chosen on July 1, of a total of 138 seats the Cosgrave party has 48. Is this your idea of strength? Ever since the election of 1932 this party has been in the same relative position of impotence. It is no stronger now.

You say that Mr. de Valera "is placed in a decidedly embarrassing position." What is there embarrassing about it? He is today in exactly the position he occupied after the election of 1932 and his party proceeded then to administer the affairs of the country without visible "embarrassment." Under the election system of Ireland, any majority party will be in the same position.

You say that "as a critic of British rule in Ireland, Mr. de Valera has been very effective. As President of the Irish Free State he has been less successful." The fact is that Mr. de Valera has never been President of the Irish Free State, for there was no such position until the last election, when Mr. de Valera had the handsome majority of 30 over Mr. Cosgrave and thus becomes the first president of the new nation, Eire.

You say that "the British have refused to be excited over his new constitution." Ostensibly so. Under cover they have made every attempt to assassinate it, as they have made every attempt to mislead with doctored news the people of the United States in regard to it.

You say the refusal of Ireland to take part in the recent Imperial Conference was "short-sighted." Will you please tell us why on earth Ireland should take any part in any such conference? It is no more a part of the British Empire than Siam is and had no more reason to be in that conference.

You say that the British "sedulously refrained from taking sides in the current general election." That is absolutely untrue. They ostensibly sneered at and belittled the whole performance but under cover they put forth every effort to help Cosgrave and to distort the issue from national independence, which was the only principle involved, to the price of cattle in Sligo. Mr. Cosgrave now, as at all times represents the British interest and had effective British support.

You say "the underlying meaning of all this is that the romantic era of liberation in Ireland is over." You say this in an American newspaper. And you say it in the face of the fact that on the straight issue of liberation the "romanticism" which you belittle and which is the foundation of your country, won out by a majority of 147,000 votes.

The mere fact that, 21 years after Padraic Pearse and his fellows were put to death for proclaiming the Republic of Ireland, that republic stands forth achieved and established ought to have been enough for an American to rejoice over. Let The Post, true to American convictions, cease to bother with the obvious red herring of the Dail and note the final triumph of Irish independence. For that is the greatest historical fact of our times.

Amelia Earhart

LET us begin by saying the worst that can be said about Amelia Earhart. She was no feminine Lindbergh, flying oceans with the precision of a transport pilot. She was no scientific flier, as those last pathetic messages picked up by the Itasca on July 2 showed: "We must be on you but cannot see you. Gas is running low. We are circling but cannot see island." She and her navigator, Frederick J. Noonan, had set out over the great wastes of the Pacific without the knowledge or the equipment which would have enabled them to ride into safety on the Itasca's invisible beam. A little more careful preparation, and those two valiant souls might still be certainly in the land of the living.

But the qualities which involved Miss Earhart and her companion in this last heroic failure were interwoven with her gay, luminous, self-confident personality. If she had not had a touch of recklessness, which arose, perhaps, out of a belief in her fortunate star, she would not have been Amelia Earhart.

* * * *

She was in rebellion against a world which had been made for women, too safe, too unexciting. She wanted to dare all that a man would dare. She must have loved what Stevenson called "the bright eyes of danger." That passion rises, strangely, sometimes tragically, in those who also love life with more than common fervor—love it so much that they must explore their way through it to that dark forest, that tumbling mass of driven water, where its boundaries lie. To that far longitude, where the light of day flames up for an instant splendidly and is gone forever, she and Fred Noonan must have come. She lost her life in the effort to get the final ecstacy out of it. She followed her vision, with a last flutter of tired wings, too far.

And what was this vision? No man, perhaps, would ever wholly know, for though hers was a type of daring which was long thought to be a masculine derivative, Amelia Earhart was wholly feminine. One remembers the outward symbols of what she was—the slender hands and wrists, the fingers like an artist's, not strong enough, one would have said, to handle a great machine in the air; the voice that was soft and beautiful; the rich inflections, the animation that would have made her an actress; the feminine dignity that melted into humor; the serious traits that had made her effective as a social worker and a teacher. What she did she did as a woman, in a womanly way, whether it was to receive with graciousness the public tributes she had earned, or to battle with storms above a dangerous ocean.

* * * *

One thinks of E. A. Robinson's lines "For a Dead Lady," but she had passed beyond that romantic and lovely conception, and was not so much a woman of the past as of the future. One thinks, too, of other lines of Robinson, though he wrote them in a far different connotation:

> Wings are but once for most of those who fly
> Till they see time lying under them like a mist
> That covers the earth.

Perhaps that was her vision. Perhaps in the vividness of her last glimpse of sun and sky and the curling tops of waves she knew that she had helped to make all women less afraid. For hers was a deeply feminine valor that could look life and death in the eye as unflinchingly as any man.

Dr. Phelps' Warning.

Dr. William Lyon Phelps is not a pessimist.

And certainly he is not an alarmist.

Anyone who has ever met him knows that he finds great joy and satisfaction in living and doing his part in the world.

We know he thinks this is the greatest and best country on all the earth.

And we are very certain he believes in a great and glorious future for this Nation.

When he utters a warning of danger to the Nation, therefore, we may well believe the danger is very real.

We have been pondering Dr. Phelps' assertion in his first sermon of the summer in Huron City last Sunday afternoon, that, "We are facing the most serious threat to our Constitution since 1861, and the most terrible danger to our nation's freedom since the framing of the Constitution."

It must have wrung his heart to even think, as he said in this sermon: "I am an old man, but it is possible that I shall survive my country."

That must have been a difficult thing for Dr. Phelps to have said. It must be a heartbreaking thing for any man to think.

He did not leave any doubt as to what he meant when he said "The almost divine wisdom which gave us our Constitution is in grave danger. The Supreme Court is the only branch of our Government which is universally respected here and abroad, and its integrity must be respected."

"We want to live in liberty under process of law," Dr. Phelps said "and if one branch of the Government takes over another we have sold our birthright and betrayed the heritage of our fathers."

This is something to ponder, and it may be we shall need to act with determination.

Dinosaur In The Badlands.

Rapid City, S. Dak., July 23.

AS YOU DRIVE into the countryside surrounding the Pineridge reservation in South Dakota, you get the feeling that you are at least coming into some of the old West you've read about—buffalo grass and cacti, soaring buttes which edge into the blue wash of an early evening sky. Between green banks the White River wanders aimlessly, its drying bed surging upward in a ghostly ribbon of bleached sand.

TOM McCARTHY.

But as you drive into the Badlands of South Dakota, you get the feeling that you are entering some enchanted inferno. It isn't a part of the West you've read about! It isn't a part of anything, except perhaps some lost world of a million years ago.

It was at sunset that I first saw that weird jungle of shapes which stretch west toward the Black Hills and northward through the Dakotas. Crimson light flushed the gray canyon walls, and merged with the pinnacles and spires, rain shaped in red clay.

For mile after mile, the Badlands stretched out from the butte, a weird nightmare of Gothic shapes, given chilling beauty by the rays of the setting sun. Here trapped in the rain eroded soil are the bones of those prehistoric animals which walked the earth a million years ago, and as you gaze on the endless desolation of the Badlands, you almost expect to see those monsters of the past trembling the earth as they emerge from hiding behind one of the hills of rock and soil.

• • • •

FOR MANY YEARS the Badlands have held their fascination for scientists seeking prehistoric remains, or endeavoring to account for the presence of this land of unrelieved desolation. Only recently, however, have they been made available to the thrill-seeking tourist, by the building of good roads.

As the road wanders through this maze of cathedral spires and Mayan temples, soaring buttes and frightening crevasses, the changing shapes take on ever new colors. Gray walls give place to crimson, white, and yellow as the road winds toward the Black Hills.

It was at sunset and off the beaten tourist track that I first saw the Badlands. High on a butte above them, I watched the sun fade from the walls, and the darkness deepen the green floor of grass hundreds of feet below. A few stunted pines grew on the well floor formed by the soaring shapes, and the shrill cry of an occasional bird drifted up the rain-twisted walls.

There was an eerie silence in this land which could support no human life. Save for the bird cries, the silence would have had an almost booming intensity. As the sun settled into darkness, the shrill scream of a bird found more weird accompaniment.

Faint and far, the howl of a coyote came through the deepening dusk. First there was a throaty sob, as from a harsh intake of breath, and then the bark; once, twice, and again. Clear and cadenced by distance it struck the ear like the slow and triple sounding of a bell.

• • • •

AS YOU LEAVE the Badlands you pass through the town of Wall. This fact gave my driving host a new tangent for his conversation.

He had been discussing the tourist business, and had told me how he let a "fortune" slip through his fingers by selling out a petrified forest, which had gauged as simply poor grazing land. However, the town of Wall reminded him of a new story, and it had for me its curious sequel in that I met its central character the next day.

"You know we've been gettin' plenty of rain," the driver said, "but it's really the first rain this country has had in years. Back in that town over there is a rancher who always claimed that dams should be used to help grazing in these parts. A lot of people laughed at him, and said he was all wrong. They said you couldn't make a dam with this soil that would hold water.

"Finally, though, and just a few months back, the WPA began to build one, and they put it on his land. It's almost completed now, and along comes this rain we've been having.

"Well, this rancher I'm telling you about is sort of a funny duck anyhow, and when it starts raining he walks right out into it. The WPA men are all heading for shelter, but he walks out to the dam, without even a coat to keep the rain off. The men wondered what he was going to do. They could never have guessed what he did.

"He walked up the side of the dam, and knelt down on the top. Then he began thanking the Almighty for 'Pennies From Heaven.' That's what he called them, just like in the picture, only some of the men said they thought he was crying."

The weather is far from being a casual subject in South Dakota!

• • • •

RAPID CITY lies at the foot of the Black Hills, and on the Skyline drive overlooking the town, the prehistoric monsters which once roamed the Badlands have been fittingly commemorated.

As a Federal relief project this tourist town was presented with half a dozen life-size figures of prehistoric animals. The figures were erected by WPA workers, and are made of concrete. The largest of the group, a dinosaur, can be seen miles away, looking down on the city and possibly reflecting on the strangeness of men and events.

People in Rapid City are a bit divided as to the worth of their overgrown lawn pieces. They go up and look at their concrete dinosaur and their saber-toothed tiger, but their pride of possession is sometimes tinged with wistfulness.

Some hold to the view that since the concrete menagerie interests the tourists, the $25,000 in Federal funds haven't been wasted. Others hold that a concrete dinosaur is a fitting example of evolutionary tendencies in Washington.

One old citizen reflected that he supposed it was all right to spend the money that way if the tourists like them. "But when you come right down to it they probably could have got that gasoline company to put them up for nothing, just for the advertising."

"You know," he said, "I'm not at all sure that I like to have those snaky necked creatures eyein' me day in and day out, even if they are only concrete. We may not have needed much of anything, and it might have been a shame to pass up that relief when we could get it, but those dang things are beginning to give me the creeps."

The King of Siam may have his white elephant, but Rapid City has its concrete dinosaur.

His Death.

The death of Sir James Barrie on June 19 took away another of those ten men of genius, all contemporaries, and all alive a few years ago: Hardy, Conrad, Moore, Kipling, Bennett, Galsworthy, Chesterton, Barrie, Shaw, Wells; and now only two are left.

In the numerous biographical notices immediately following Barrie's death, many of them stated that he had been successful from the start; the truth is he nearly starved; and if he had not had a will of iron and the courage characteristic of the Scots, he would never have attained either fame or fortune.

• • • •

Barrie was desperately poor in his boyhood and when he was a student at the university; if we knew what his yearly expenses were, we should be appalled. Then he got a job on a provincial newspaper, and he said he had plenty of time to write, because no time was wasted on meals. As he knew there was nothing in the cupboard, he did not spend any time looking into it.

But, while doing his full-time job on this newspaper, he wrote other things and sent them to London. Then he went up to the great city and conquered it. I think one reason he loved London with such intensity was because he went there in poverty and obscurity and then for more than 40 years was one of its best-known citizens. His flat in the heart of London overlooked the river, and on every occasion when he took me out on the balcony, he seemed to me like a king surveying his wide domain.

Hope For Solution Of Complex Dairy Problem Seen In Circuit Court Decision Upholding AAA Marketing Agreements.

By Joel Underwood.

Boston.

The recent decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, upholding the constitutionality of the marketing agreement and order provisions of the Federal agricultural adjustment act, reinstates an order of the Secretary of Agriculture regulating the Boston milk market. In reaching this result, the Circuit Court overruled the First District Court in its conclusion that the Hoosac Mills case invalidated the marketing agreement and order provisions of the AAA as well as the crop production control and processing tax features of legislation. It declared these two sets of provisions to be separable.

The constitutional authority for this control by the Federal Government is the predominantly interstate character of the Boston milk market. Almost 90 per cent of the milk handled by distributors in Boston comes from outside the State. More than 18,000 individual producers, chiefly in Maine and Vermont, contribute to this daily supply. This group comprises individual farmers, co-operative dairies and producers who have exclusive arrangements with chain retail stores and the large processors and distributors.

Parties To Problem Fall In Three Groups.

THESE INDIVIDUALS, associations and companies fall into three well-defined groups. In the first are the milk producers; in the second, the distributors, and in the third, the consumers.

In this triple-linked chain two sets of financial transactions take place. The distributor pays the producer for the milk which he buys, and the consumer pays the distributor for the milk which he consumes. The interest of the producer is in getting the highest price he can for his milk, and the interest of the consumer is in getting good milk at a low price. The distributor tries to buy cheap and sell dear. Although the distributor performs a needed service in bringing the milk from the farm to the home, he frequently finds his interest opposed to that of both the farmer and the consumer.

The real difficulty from the point of view of the AAA is the serious effect which a disorganized market has on the price which the farmer gets for his milk. A great number of distributors engaged in a ruinous competition for customers produces a situation in which the farmer is forced to accept prices for his milk below the cost of producing it.

On a now familiar economic theory, the farmer's purchasing power is reduced below the point where he is able to consume his share of manufactured goods and his standard of living is thereby lowered. The objective of the AAA is to stabilize the price of milk to the farmer whenever it appears that the equation between the prices he pays out to the prices he receives as income is out of line with a predetermined index of parity.

One factor which makes the farmer particularly vulnerable is the perishability of the product. It cannot be stored for long and remain marketable nor can the production of milk be easily curtailed until the price becomes more attractive. A manufacturer can stop his machines when his inventories pile up and start them up again when they become depleted. The farmer cannot do this, short of reducing his herds. Such reductions, however, would be tantamount to the destruction of machinery by a manufacturer.

Distributor Found Most Variable Factor.

IN THE OPERATION of the act, the distributor of milk from one point of view is the most variable factor in the price structure. It is the distributor and not the farmer who is expected to adjust his margin of profit to changing market conditions. This point is well illustrated in the story of the price of milk to the producer since August, 1936, when the application of the milk order for the Boston market was suspended by court decision.

At the time of the suspension, the farmer was getting approximately 7¼ cents a quart for his milk, but this declined to 4½ cents in some cases afterward. When the farmer was getting his 7¼ cents a quart, the margin to milk distributors from sales to consumers was about 5¾ cents a quart. As the price paid to producers declined, the margin accruing to distributors increased to 7½ cents in some cases.

The domination of the Boston market by out-of-State milk creates serious problems for Massachusetts producers. There are strong pressures from Bay State producers for preferential treatment but there are equally strong obstacles, for the milk-producing industry is extremely responsive to changes in the state of the market. A higher than the market price for Massachusetts milk would simply persuade distributors to handle out-of-State milk exclusively.

The AAA does not attempt to fix the price which distributors charge the consumers of milk. This function is undertaken by the State milk control board. This is an extremely ticklish task because this price may produce unfavorable reactions in the Boston market. If, for example, the price of milk to consumers in Springfield or Worcester were fixed at a rate high enough above the Boston rate to be attractive to Boston distributors, the interstate stream of milk would be diverted into these secondary markets and the local producer would suffer thereby.

AAA Concerned With Interstate Milk Flow.

BECAUSE the authority of the AAA under the marketing agreement and order provisions of the act is confined to interstate commerce, the flow of interstate milk is the primary concern of the regional administration. In some cases, however, it is conceivable that the orders of the State milk control board might operate to discriminate against the interstate supply. In such an event, the administration is equipped to remove such discriminations wherever they occur. The legal and constitutional authority for this power is the series of decisions of the Supreme Court upholding the power of the I. C. C. to control intrastate railroad rates in similar circumstances.

Short of such en eventuality, however, the AAA has to depend upon the voluntary co-operation of the State authorities in preventing serious inequities in the milk industry. It is sometimes difficult to persuade such officials to adjust the State situation to the interstate situation. State officials are not inclined to put the interests of out-of-State milk producers before the interests of local farmers. Indeed, some resistance to the new milk order of the AAA is expected to come from Massachusetts dairymen and farmers because they feel that it will operate more to the advantage of the Maine and Vermont farmers than it will to themselves.

Before the order is finally promulgated however, the consent of two-thirds of the 18,000 producers concerned to proposed amendments to the order must be obtained. These amendments are intended to bring the order, drawn up more than a year ago, more in line with current market conditions. If the referendum is a vote for the order, it is expected that the order will go into effect on August 1 or thereabouts. If it does, it will mean the partial stabilization, at least, of a milk market which has been considerably disorganized for some time.

Was It A Porpoise?

June's crisis of the month occurred when, in the midst of the heated debate over German and Italian interference in Spain, the Nazis asserted that two torpedo attacks had been made by loyalists upon the cruiser Leipzig. Germany, followed by Italy, used the occasion to withdraw from the so-called neutrality patrol, to cry loudly about wounded national honor, to threaten to blow another Spanish city to pieces and to cause international tremors that have not yet subsided.

Now comes Vice Admiral C. V. Usburne, of the British navy, with a theory to explain the whole matter. Writing to the London Daily Telegraph, he suggests that the guilty party may have been a porpoise. "I have seen porpoises going along about 30 knots," he says, "and straight as a die shoot under the bottom of a ship, simulating exactly a torpedo attack."

Was it a porpoise that caused European peace to hang in the balance for several tense days? Maybe it was, but we offer another theory for whatever it may be worth: Isn't it more likely that it was a red herring?

Poland Today

From The Central European Observer

Unique Totalitarian State.

THE PUBLIC ABROAD find it difficult to get their bearings in the internal political system of Poland which has numerous features that distinguish it very considerably and fundamentally from other authoritative regimes. The representatives of the government bloc today take every opportunity of emphasizing the fact that the Polish system of government is neither fascism nor Hitlerism but a special Polish system issuing not only from internal needs but also from the key position—and very delicate situation—of Poland located as it is between two states (Germany and the Soviet Union) that are increasingly on a footing of rivalry.

Since the coup d'etat carried out 12 years ago by the military group under Marshal Pilsudski, Poland has been under an authoritative regime. Nevertheless the victorious camp has not succeeded fully in giving a totalitarian direction to internal political conditions. The opposition parties continue to exist. They have not lost their influence with the masses; on the contrary, their influence has grown. The present regime in Poland suffered a grave blow by the death of Marshal Pilsudski, its ideological and political leader who enjoyed unique authority that was not confined to the government camp.

NONE THE LESS the regime has been maintained. A change has been made in the constitution giving extensive powers to the president of the republic. Alongside the office of President there has been instituted the function of a head of the army whose representative, Gen. Rydz-Smigly, has gradually acquired increasing powers not only in military matters but also in the sphere of internal policy. There has thus arisen a certain dualism in the highest offices of state. At the same time a new franchise has made it practically impossible for the opposition to make itself felt, while the constitution has substantially reduced the competence of the Seym and Senate, making of them really bodies of a supervisory character.

When direct influence upon government affairs had thus been made impossible the political organization of the government camp was dissolved. It soon became clear that by doing so the present regime had lost all influence upon the Polish masses. Steps were therefore taken toward a reorganization of the supporters of the regime. With the support of the highest constitutional and military authorities there was founded the Party of National Unity.

In March last Col. Koc made his well-known ideological and political declaration which was meant to serve as a basis for this new political organization of the Polish masses. Koc's program did not go beyond the general theses which are accepted by the bulk of Polish public opinion, especially the principal demand of a concentration of all forces for ensuring the defense of the State. The Koc campaign was launched with great elan. It soon became evident, however, that the limits of success which it presented were restricted. The new movement merely won over the adherents of the Pilsudski camp. The masses of the Polish workers, farmers and townspeople (especially the young people) remained faithful to their old traditional political organizations.

Alongside the camp of Col. Koc, which for the present is merely a new political party comprising the adherents of the existing regime, there thus still exist a whole series of political parties. Of these, the right (the National Democrats) strive to attain exclusive power, and by reason of their ideology, and especially their intense anti-Semitism, resemble in many ways the Nazis of Germany. Other large parties, in particular the Socialists and the Agrarian Popular Party, struggle to restore a democratic and parliamentary regime.

It is difficult to say today what is the strength of the various political groups that are fighting for the power in Poland. The opposition did not put forward any candidates at the last parliamentary elections in the autumn of 1935. They issued the watchword of boycott of the elections.

• • • •

FOR THE IMMEDIATE future the Polish government is faced with a whole series of important tasks, mainly in the economic sphere. One of the most grave questions is that of the due equipment of the army. The extensive armament now being carried out by Poland's two neighbors (Germany and Soviet Union) have made the needs in this connection both great and urgent. Connected with the problem of the equipment of the army is the great scheme of creating a new central industrial area in the so-called strategic triangle at Sandomer in Central Poland, where all the industrial sectors of importance for the defense of the state are to be concentrated.

Meanwhile, Poland is very backward in industrialization. She remains a country predominantly agricultural. The big growth of population (annually some 400,000 souls) causes very considerable overpopulation in some districts. In former years, especially before the war, a remedy was found in emigration. Postwar conditions, however, closed this safety valve. From the overpopulated rural areas the masses, for whom there is no work, invade the towns and townships where there is likewise no opening for work. The industries of Poland have also their big unemployment figure.

The situation is complicated by the fact that throughout a considerable portion of Poland the small towns are populated by largish numbers of Jews. In the large towns (Lodz, Warsaw) Jews form one-third of the population, while in small towns in some parts of Poland they are in the majority. The share of the Jews in commerce, industry, the trades and the liberal professions (law, medicine) is very considerable, and is sometimes in the nature of a monopoly. The Polish element bearing townward runs up against Jewish opposition. Thus serious struggles occur, and an anti-Semitic campaign results based in Poland largely on economic and social motives.

The Once Over

Elmer Twitchell is all worked up over the recent report to the President on technological trends by the national resources committee, which urged that the Government watch all inventions and take steps to control them before they upset our whole plan of living. Elmer has also filed a report at Washington in which he calls attention to many specific inventions which need attention, particularly the paper napkin.

• • • •

"Never has the paper napkin invaded American life to such poportions as it has this summer," declares Elmer. "It is an outstanding cause of nervous prostration. Eighty per cent of the jitters now afflicting the American race can be traced to the paper napkin.

• • • •

"If we had had a Bureau of Coming Events at Washington we could have acted before the paper drinking cup made such strides, too, and before the old-fashioned tin dipper designer, tin cup manufacturer and glass blower had been knocked in the head. The effect of the paper drinking cup on our social system is beyond appraisal. It's got so the average man can't enjoy a drink of water unless it is dripping down on his shirt.

• • • •

"What has the Roosevelt Administration done about beer in tin cans? Bottlers have been thrown out of work everywhere and I know a lot of people who have quit drinking beer. Unless the trend is stopped somebody will be offering champagne in tin cans. And that will mean revolution."

• • • •

Elmer thinks there should be a Secretary of Cellophane at Washington, too. "Cellophane is getting out of control," he says. "The next thing you know we will be getting a cup of coffee wrapped in it."

• • • •

"And another thing," concluded Elmer. "The Government had better watch those Piccard balloon ascensions. As long as this stratospherist was going up with only one or two balloons it was all right, but this idea of riding around on whole clusters of 'em may excite the public imagination. Suppose it becomes a fad?"

It has issued 29,954,821 account numbers to persons covered by the old-age pension provisions of the social security act. For each account number there is a thumbnail sketch, giving information about the family and occupation of the individual.

Estimate Exceeded.

The registrations are exceeding the original estimate of the board. Early this year officials expressed belief about 26,000,000 persons, employed by three and a half million employers, would come under the act at this time.

The normal increase in population, now estimated at 128,429,000, may increase the total number to 40,000,000 ultimately.

Summarizing activities in fields other than old-age benefit program, the board reported that:

All States and Territories have laws to protect workers against complete loss of income during periods of involuntary unemployment. An estimated 21,000,000 workers come under these laws. From February, 1936, to July 1 of this year, Federal grants totaling $10,096,899 have been made to States to pay for administration of their unemployment insurance laws.

Average Pay $18.

The sum of $35,717,178 in Federal grants to States to aid the needy aged was approved by the board for the second quarter of this year. This brought the total grants since February, 1936, to $149,263,561. The average amount paid to needy, aged individuals from Federal, State and local funds was $18.63 for the month of May.

Thirty-three States have Federally-approved plans for aiding the blind. Federal grants totaling $5,848,092 have been made. The average pay to individuals was $24.56 in May.

Plans for aiding dependent children have been approved for 35 States and Federal grants made total $17,270,666. The average paid to a family in May was $30.92.

Foe Says Tapping Mayor's Phone to Bring Big Expose

Philadelphia, July 25 (AP).—State Senator Frank Ruth declared today that the tapping of telephone wires leading to the home of Louis E. Wilgarde, secretary to Mayor S. Davis Wilson, was "warranted" and the "revelations" would be made at the public hearings of the legislative committee investigating Pennsylvania courts.

Mayor Wilson yesterday held Wallace F. Ely, a State motor policeman, in $5,800 bail on a charge of tapping wires. Ely was on special assignment for the Ruth committee.

Ruth said the committee of Democrats and Republicans had no intention to "go after" Mayor Wilson.

Mayor Wilson yesterday declared the wire tapping was an "attempt to assassinate my character," and he announced his candidacy for Governor of Pennsylvania in 1938.

Yugoslav Church Suspends Official

Belgrade, July 25 (AP).—The Yugoslav Orthodox Church temporarily expelled Minister of Justice Nicholas Subotich from membership because he supported a Yugoslav concordat with the Vatican, the executive synod made known today.

Punitive action against other ministers and legislators was indicated as the synod met to discuss opposition to the concordat, indorsed last week in the lower house of Parliament and to be acted upon by the Senate probably in the fall.

Government leaders had hoped death of the patriarch Narvana, head of the orthodox church, would bring a truce in the dispute. A crowd beat two assemblymen who voted for the concordat when they tried to sign a booklet of condolence for the patriarch at the cathedral today.

2 Seek Sheriff's Post In Washington County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, July 25.—The next Washington County election is not until November, 1938, but two already have announced that they are candidates for sheriff. City Market Master Richard Duffey, who is a former sheriff and magistrate, and Harry E. Newkirk, lumber dealer, said they will seek the Democratic nomination. A sheriff in this county is not permitted to succeed himself after serving four years, but may skip a term and again be a candidate.

Cuba's New 3-Year Plan Gives Homesteaders 33 to 167 Acres

By the Associated Press.

Havana, July 25. — Farm land would be parceled in 33 to 167 acre lots to Cuban homesteaders, with the government keeping strict watch on rentals of private land, under the island's new "three-year plan."

The plan is designed to reorganize island agriculture, industry and finance.

The program was made public today as government commissions prepared laws to carry out the sweeping changes.

The plan was fathered by Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuba's "strong man," with the support of President Frederico Laredo Bru.

Farmers would obtain grants according to the size of their families and the productivity of the land—with the poor man getting the preference. The colonizer would be financed by the government in his first planting and would be aided by agricultural experts. Title would pass to the farmer only after he proved his worth.

Co-operatives would be encouraged for storage, transport and marketing of produce.

The tenant of private farms would be aided by a section of the plan, entitled "Rationalization of the enjoyment of property."

C. I. O. Will Seek To Enroll Office Workers in D. C.

A drive to organize all office workers outside the Federal Government will be begun here shortly, according to announcement yesterday of James Gilman, vice president of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, an affiliate of the C. I. O.

Gilman arrived in Washington yesterday. He said a mass meeting will be held at the Hamilton Hotel Wednesday evening, with Joseph Baker, newly appointed president of the United Federal Workers, offering greetings. A charter will be presented to the new local, No. 27, at the meeting.

Economy Plan Change Barred By Chautemps

Premier's Stand Threatens to Cause Split in People's Front.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 25.—The possibility of a split in the People's Front appeared today when Premier Camille Chautemps served notice he would not alter his drastic economy program.

His stand was backed by a spokesman for his own party, the radical Socialists. His notice was considered addressed to the Socialists, largest group in the left wing coalition which supports Chautemps' cabinet.

The premier, speaking at Navell near Vendome, warned the Socialists he would not yield to their demands for mitigation of his program.

The Socialists, led by Leon Blum, Chautemps' predecessor as premier, have objected to the proposed wholesale slashing of government expenditures. At their national convention at Marseille two weeks ago they advocated a united People's Front program of social reforms which Chautemps would be called on to carry out.

"There is no durable social progress without financial order," Chautemps warned. "When I took power I clearly defined my program in a public document which is and will remain my government's guiding chart—my ministerial declaration."

Pierre Maze, secretary general of the radical Socialist party, promised full support to the Cabinet.

"We think the necessity of a breathing spell in expenditures is more evident than ever," he said.

Chautemps reaffirmed his intention to balance the budget by cutting expenses "in order to cut short rumors which might weaken confidence in the future of our finances."

The task was made no easier, he said, "by political party manifestation."

D. C. Guild Obtains Referendum Delay

New York, July 25 (AP).—The American Newspaper Guild's international executive board announced today the unanimous adoption of two resolutions for the conduct of the proposed membership referendum on affiliation with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

One of the resolutions delays the referendum until special committees of the Washington, D. C., and Columbus, Ohio, guilds, which asked time for the proper restatement of the question, complete the draft. The other eliminates from voting all who have joined the guild since the St. Louis convention.

The referendum, requested by the Columbus guild and seconded by units in 16 other cities, is also to poll the guild membership on the convention's indorsement of the Spanish government cause, independent political action, a large WPA appropriation and President Roosevelt's judiciary reorganization measure.

Lincoln Green Retiring From Southern System

Lincoln Green, assistant to the president of the Southern Railway System, is retiring August 1, after more than half-century of service, it was announced yesterday.

He will be succeeded by Richard W. Wirt, assistant freight traffic manager in charge of Florida traffic. A native of Virginia, Wirt will take over a new office, that of assistant vice president, with headquarters in Washington.

List Closes Wednesday.

Applications for the position of attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital will be received until Wednesday night, it was announced by the Civil Service yesterday. The entrance salary is $1,260 a year, and persons between 18 and 35 years of age are eligible. Application blanks may be obtained at 916 G street northwest.

Westbrook Pegler is back from his vacation. His column "Fair Enough" will appear in its usual place in The Post tomorrow.

Chamber Calls Revised Wage Bill Worst Yet

Lumber Industry Group Joins in Protest to Senate.

The Black-Connery wages and hours bill now before the Senate is more objectionable than the original draft, George H. Davis, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said last night in transmitting to the Senate a report of a special chamber committee opposing the measure.

The chamber's attack coincided with one by the Southern Lumber Industry committee, which warned farmers that the bill increases processing costs of numerous farm commodities.

"This revised bill," Davis wrote, "omits a desirable feature of the original—a section through which Congress would properly protect the States from defeat through interstate commerce of the action they may take in relation to maximum hours, minimum wages, and child labor."

Provisions of the bill, said the chamber's summary of the committee report:

"Bar from interstate commerce goods which industries produce without observance of standards prescribed for them by a Federal board acting within the limits of statutory discretion.

"Bar from interstate commerce goods which, although produced in accordance with standards set by the Federal board, subsequently pass through the hands of a concern which does not adhere to these standards.

"Extend these powers of the board to:

"Wholly intrastate enterprises, not shipping anything into interstate commerce if the Federal board believes that in State production the intrastate enterprises have an advantage over those producing in the same State and selling both locally and interstate.

"Wholly intrastate enterprises, not receiving materials from interstate commerce or shipping products into interstate commerce, if the board believes that, otherwise, such local concerns would have an advantage in the local markets over enterprises of other States shipping through interstate commerce into the local markets."

WPA Workers Win Congress Backing

Already 66 Representatives and 13 Senators have announced support of the Schwellenbach-Allen resolution protecting WPA workers, David Lasser, national president of the Workers Alliance of America, said yesterday.

The Schwellenbach-Allen resolution provides that WPA workers who cannot find employment in private industry at prevailing wages shall not be dropped from the rolls, except for cause, and that WPA workers who find temporary private employment shall be furloughed during the period of employment, and not discharged from WPA.

Lasser said a wide campaign is planned for the enactment of this resolution at the present session of Congress and for reinstatement of hundreds of thousands of WPA workers who have been recently discharged.

"The fact that so many Congressmen have permitted us to publicly announce their support of this resolution, after only a preliminary canvas," Mr. Lasser stated, "indicates that there is tremendous support for this resolution in Congress and throughout the country. We are confident that once our national campaign gets under way it will be found that a majority of both houses will support this resolution."

Palestine Partition Is Attacked by Fish

By the Associated Press.

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, declared yesterday the proposed partition of Palestine by the British government is a "deliberate breach of trust."

"It smacks of duplicity and double dealing," he said in a statement.

THE FIRST OF EIGHT REASONS WHY . . .

The Washington Post Grows

THE SPEED of a newspaper's growth is dependent upon its ability to know what its readers want and to give those readers the best of everything that must go into the production of an outstanding publication. Almost every one knows that THE WASHINGTON POST has doubled its circulation in less than four years. This was no accident. The reasons why are interesting. And the purpose of this series of chats with readers is simply to tell how it was done.

NO. 1—NEWS

THE EARLIEST equivalent of the modern newspaper was a series of official announcements of the Roman Empire called "Acta Diurna" (Daily Happenings). They were posted prominently and copied by scribes for dispatch to provincial subscribers . . . these copying scribes were the journalistic cousins of today's reporters, editors and publishers. Probably the earliest published news pamphlet was the German "Avisa Relation oder Zeitung," in 1609. In May, 1622, appeared what is conceded to be the first English newspaper proper, "Weekly Newes from Italy, Germany, etc." —published in London by Nicholas Bourne and Thomas Archer. These enterprising editor-publishers had a formidable competitor, however, in one Nathaniel Butter, who, as early as 1605, had printed and distributed dramatic reports of two murder trials in Yorkshire, England. The first American newspaper was established in April, 1704, by John Campbell, postmaster at Boston. Campbell, for some time, had been writing news-letters to various colonial governors of New England and his publishing venture was quite properly named "The Boston News-Letter." From these early beginnings have grown the great newspapers of the present time and . . . although editorials, comics, columns and other features have grown in popular favor tremendously during the past 40 years . . . complete news coverage—local, national and international—is today, as when "Acta Diurna" first appeared, the real backbone of the truly great newspaper. That is why The Washington Post spares no effort to make its news gathering, writing and editing facilities the best.

THE WASHINGTON POST, day in and day out, seven mornings a week, brings to its 100,000 readers the most complete NEWS picture of the day . . . local, national, international.

NEWS CONFERENCE . . .

*THROUGHOUT THE NIGHT, every night in the week, and before each edition of The Washington Post goes to press, these four men confer over the news of the world, decide which stories will appear on Page 1 of the paper, where and how all other stories will be "played." OVER THE WIRES . . .

THE POST'S staff writers and special correspondents on assignment away from Washington send in their material by Western Union and Postal Telegraph direct to the "wire room" in The Post Building, where wire operators interpret dots and dashes into news stories.

WALTMAN AND STAFF . . .

*THESE FIVE MEN cover the news of official Washington for The Washington Post, daily report the news from White House, Senate, House of Representatives, Supreme Court . . . all other Government agencies. 40,000 PER HOUR . . .

IN 1810 Frederick Koenig, a Saxon journeyman printer, raised the output of the old handpress to 200 copies an hour (for a four-page paper) by using steam power. Today, the electrically propelled presses at The Washington Post turn out a complete newspaper of 40 pages at the rate of 40,000 per hour!

COPY DESK . . .

EVERY ONE of the thousands of words that appear in The Washington Post each morning first pass through the hands of the men seated about this desk. Stories are edited here, heads and subheads written before they go to the composing room, where they are set up in type. Next, the type is "made up" into pages and each page matted by the stereotypers. Curved lead plates are made from these mats, from which the actual paper is printed.

Carol Rebuked As He Prepares To Visit Hitler

Britain, France, Russia Warn Him to End Political Juggling.

By the United Press.

Paris, July 25.—King Carol of Rumania, whose diplomatic flirtations with Berlin and Warsaw threatened to upset the delicate balance of middle European politics, tonight apparently had been rudely awakened by the combined diplomatic pressure of France, Britain and Russia.

Carol prepared to pack his trunks and leave for Berlin on his tour of European capitals, rebuffed by France and Britain in his efforts to have the French and British legations at Bucharest raised to the rank of embassies.

Behind this apparently innocuous refusal was a sharp warning of both governments, and indirectly from Moscow, to stop tampering with the present balance in Central Europe.

The factual side of the curious diplomatic rebuke was the blunt advice to Carol to "put Nicholas Titulescu back in office as foreign minister and stop playing around."

Titulescu was the bulwark of Franco-Rumanian relations and as foreign minister was chiefly responsible for Rumania making peace with Russia. Russia, negotiating a nonaggression treaty with the Little Entente in 1933, agreed to let Rumania keep Bessarabia, which was sliced off as Rumania's share of the territorial profits of the war.

In 1934 diplomatic relations were resumed between Moscow and Bucharest after conversations between Russia's sturdy foreign spokesman Maxim Litvinov, and Titulescu.

Since then Titulescu has been replaced by Victor Antonescu as foreign minister, and Rumania's foreign policy has swung sharply toward Berlin and Warsaw, and away from the Anglo-Franco-Russian orbit.

When Carol visited here after his trip to Warsaw, where new Polish relations presumably were cemented, French diplomats made it plain they wanted Titulescu back as foreign minister at Bucharest.

It was reported the French government said: "No more credits until Titulescu is back."

Carol left Paris for a brief visit to London without making any definite promise, and almost immediately Moscow's Pravda, official Communist newspaper, announced that the Bessarabian question had been re-opened.

To any neutral observer, the inference was sufficiently plain. The Bessarabian question has been a delicate one since Benjamin Disraeli, Queen Victoria's famous prime minister, traveled to Berlin to dictate peace terms in the Russo-Turkish war in 1878, when Rumanian independence was proclaimed.

Bessarabia was assigned to Russia, with safeguards for England to insure that Russia would not penetrate too far down in the Balkans. During the World War Bessarabia, which lies on the northeastern border of Rumania, was assigned to Russia.

The gist of the conversations in Paris was to show Carol—before he called on Adolf Hitler and Herman Goering in Berlin—that good relations with Moscow, and consequently with France, Czechoslovakia, Britain and Geneva, must form the basis of Rumania's foreign policy, or Bessarabia will be the rich plum that may pop out of Carol's pudding.

While in Paris, Carol asked for further credits to complete military re-armament and provide for future buying of machinery abroad. He was coldly turned down. He asked for embassies and was turned down again.

All he got, apparently, was a rigorous catechism on his intentions concerning Czechoslovakia and whether his agreement with Poland intended ultimately to result in the dismembering of Czechoslovakia.

According to unofficial sources here, Carol's replies were not convincing, and French fears concerning Carol's visit to Warsaw—which they believed was to reach an agreement providing for mutual military assistance on an offensive as well as defensive basis—were strengthened.

Paris now interprets Carol's tour as a definite rapprochement of Bucharest and Hitler's schemes aimed against France's eastern allies—Russia and Czechoslovakia.

Utility Tax Claim Of $4,000,000 Filed

Treasury officials last night disclosed they had filed a tax claim for approximately $4,000,00 against the Associated Gas and Electric Company—heart of the sprawling utility empire controlled by Howard C. Hopson, the United Press said in a copyrighted story.

Hopson, bitter foe of New Deal power policies, was reported to have spent more than $1,000,000 in a futile effort to defeat the public utility holding company act and its so-called "death sentence." The new claim brought the total pending assessments against Hopson's power kingdom to $50,000,000.

The Treasury's latest move followed a re-examination of the books of the Associated Gas and Electric Company and its 206 subsidiaries which is reported to have revealed that large sources of income had not been tapped by revenue collectors. They included earnings from sales of power, coal and water as well as intercorporate sales of securities and management contracts.

Prosecution of the claims against the Hopson empire is being directed personally by Morrison Shafroth, chief counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Opposing him in the legal contest is Charles M. Trammell, a former member of the Board of Tax Appeals who resigned to become affiliated with the Hopson enterprises.

Caucasus Army Chief Sent to 'Other Work'

Moscow, July 25 (U.P.).—N. D. Kashirin, Army commander in the North Caucasus, and a judge at the trial of eight generals recently, has been appointed to "other work," it was announced today. Commander Semion Konstantinovich Timoshenko, civil war hero and vice commander of the Kiev military circuit, succeeds Kashirin.

Dozens of transfers have been made lately in the present government drive against "Trotskyists." In many cases they were followed by denunciation, trial and execution.

Display to Demonstrate That Art Grows in Back Yard.

Art grows in your own back yard. That is the main principle back of the exhibit of drawings, water colors, clay models and sketches scheduled to open today in the Americanization School at Tenth and H street northwest.

Art grows in your own back yard and it starts at any age. The youngest artists whose work will be displayed are 4 years old, and they range up to 60. Their tutor, Ralph Cesar, pays little attention to the notion that artists are a class apart, an unfamiliar race that lives in garrets.

He pays less attention to formal schools of art. Realism, cubism, surrealism, impressionism may all be present in the exhibition, but they are not labeled. Cesar's primary purpose is to increase the power of his students to understand the objects they draw or model, to understand the object itself and its relation to other objects.

When a 4-year-old boy draws a picture of a very large ant, and peppers the background with huge stars, Cesar is pleased. The spontaneous association of an ant and the stars is far more promising than a perfect copy of a plaster statue, he believes.

That is partly the explanation of the clay models. These are the work of the youngest members of the class, and through them the children find it possible to work out their own principles of perspective, space relationships, and scale. After they have modeled houses, automobiles, people, and the Washington Monument in clay, they can turn to paper and draw in three dimensions, without ever hearing the words perspective or dimension.

Another very young Japanese girl painted a telegraph pole and a flower. The flower is almost as tall as the pole, the pole slightly warped, and a trifle too wide for its height, but Cesar believes the girl is on the right track when she finds out for herself that a telegraph pole is material for a painting.

The favorite subjects of the children are houses, their friends, animals and boats. Their favorite exercise is using wild color. Cesar lets them work out their own color problems, and if a house is the color of a bright red, highly polished apple, it is all right with him, and with the picture too.

Portraits and figures drawn from life are the contribution of the older artists. Frequently one member of the class acts as model for the others, and the exhibit gives a fair cross section in portrait of the more than 40 students.

The exhibition is being sponsored by the Americanization School Association to acquaint the public with the work of the class. The art work is not directly connected with the Americanization program of the school. Cesar has been conducting the classes there for the past two years as a WPA project. The exhibition is to be open today, tomorrow and Thursday from 9:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m.

Air Line Pact Made By French, Nazis

Paris, July 25 (U.P.).—An agreement for widespread co-operation has been reached between Air France and Lufthansa, subsidized commercial airlines of France and Germany, the newspaper journal Industrielle said today.

The French foreign office has authorized the air ministry to sanction a pooling of the two lines' facilities to South America, permitting Lufthansa to use French bases on the African Coast, the paper said.

The foreign office withheld authorization for a common Franco-German airline across the North Atlantic to the United States and concession to Lufthansa of a postal liaison to the Far East.

Tenancy Setup By Next Month Forecast Here

Loans Are Unlikely Before January; RA Probably to Be Agency.

By the Associated Press.

The machinery for the new farm tenancy program just enacted, will be operating by early August, officials of the Agriculture Department said yesterday.

It is unlikely, however, that the first loans to help tenants become farm owners will be made before next January. Experience with previous farm programs has shown that four or five months is the minimum time necessary to get all preliminary details out of the way and start handing over the loan money, the officials asserted.

Designation of the group which will handle the loans to tenants for purchase of land and equipment, officials said, cannot be made until Secretary Wallace returns from his vacation.

The Resettlement Administration is expected to get the job because of its experience in making drought and other loans to more than 500,000 farm families during the past three years.

County committees, similar to those which have supervised the operations of agricultural adjustment programs in the field since 1933, will be set up to choose the tenants who will receive loans, the land they will purchase, and to supervise their farming operations. All activities of the committee will be subject, however, to final determination by State and national authorities.

Department officials said they expected charges of "political activity" and favoritism in the selection of tenants in some cases but added that "every effort will be made to prevent it and to adjust any injustices which occur."

During 1938 probably not more than 3,500 tenants will advance to farm ownership with the Government's assistance, the officials said. The measure provides $10,000,000 for tenant loans during the first year and it has been estimated that these will average about $3,000 each.

WPA Theater Combined With Arts Projects

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Works Progress assistant administrator, last night announced an "administrative consolidation" of the Federal theater project with the four arts projects in New York City. Paul Edwards, formerly WPA administrator in Maine and Massachusetts but now stationed in Washington, was named to head the new project. Harold Stein was detached from that post to make a Nationwide survey of Federal art projects.

German, U.S. Bund Picnic Lacks 'Heils' And Nazi Salutes

Andover, N. J., July 25 (A.P.).—More than 2,000 members of the German-American bund picnicked at Camp Nordland today without the marching, which, last Sunday brought charges of "Nazi" and "un-American" activities against the bund.

Two flags were flown—one American, the other German. But gone were the "heils" and "Nazi salutes" that marked the opening day's activities.

August Klapprott, State president of the bund who called the spot "America's white man's camp," charged that four signs giving directions to the camp had been torn down. He said the "guilty ones were afraid to come close and show their faces here."

Klapprott invited Federal investigation of the camp but said "they will find nothing wrong."

Flier, Companion Saved As Plane Strikes Wires

Newport, Pa., July 25 (U.P.).—Capt. Champe Taliaserro, Hockessin, Del., Eastern Airlines pilot, and his companion, John McGlinn, Philadelphia, escaped death tonight when their cabin plane struck a high-tension electric line and plunged into the Juniata River.

The plane, owned by Taliaserro, cracked up in 4 feet of water about a mile south of Newport, a community 20 miles north of Harrisburg. Residents of summer cottages along the river rescued the pilot and his passenger, both of whom suffered scalp lacerations and bruises.

Woman Ends Life, Ill-Health Blamed

Despondent over ill-health, Mrs. May Buhrmeister, 36, killed herself with illuminating gas in the kitchen of her home, 4701 Forty-ninth street northwest, yesterday.

She was found unconscious in the kitchen by her daughter, Charlotte, 12, who summoned police and a doctor. Charlotte told police that all the doors and windows in the room were closed and that all the gas jets on the stove were open. She said her mother underwent an operation last year and has been despondent.

Police last night were attempting to locate the dead woman's husband, who is a chauffeur for a family vacationing at Warm Springs.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Bluemont Woman Is Killed by Auto

Mrs. Ida Sowers, 61, of Bluemont, Va., was killed instantly yesterday afternoon when she was struck, police said, by a car driven by Melvin Reed, 18, also of Bluemont.

Police said Mrs. Sowers was walking along the highway near Bluemont when Reed's car, going in the same direction, swerved and struck her.

Reed was held at the Leesburg jail and an inquest set for today.

67% of Land Put Under AAA Protection Plan

Farming Passed Through Important Transition, 1936 Report Says.

By the Associated Press.

The AAA reported yesterday the year 1936 was a period of transition in American farming from the surplus-elimination phase to a permanent land protection policy.

In its annual report, the AAA declared its gradual approach to an agricultural conservation program after the turbulent period of preventing farm surpluses in 1933 and 1934 was turned into a precipitate dash when the Supreme Court declared the adjustment act unconstitutional early in 1936.

Under the new "soil conservation" act adopted in February, 1936, the primary aid "became the conservation of the soil and improved land management" and during the year 67 per cent, or more than 283,000,000 acres, of the country's farm land was listed in applications from farmers for participation in the land protection policy, AAA Chief H. R. Tolley declared.

Instead of paying farmers to plant less wheat, corn, oats, cotton and other crops as had been done before, the purpose of the Administration in 1936 was to help them shift from soil-depleting to soil-conserving crops and to use cover crops, terracing, contour furrowing and other means of protecting their land from wind and water erosion, Tolley added.

The report declared a crop insurance system (Secretary Wallace's "ever-normal granary") is a vital necessity to guard against "two directly opposite types of hazard" facing the Nation.

One "is the danger of price collapse from overproduction," as in 1931 and 1932, the other the "danger of food shortages" from crop failures such as were caused by droughts in 1934 and 1936.

Elaborating on excessive production, the report declared that "there should be provision for positive commodity control," with a definite quota assigned to each farm.

Archbishop Breaks Church Tradition

Oxford, Eng., July 25 (A.P.).—The Archbishop of Canterbury broke a tradition of the Church of England today by celebrating communion for members of all Christian denominations at the World Conference on Church, Community and State.

The Bishop of Chichester announced a delegation would relay to Germany's embattled Evangelical Church leaders the proceedings of the conference "at the time most convenient for church leaders in Germany."

They will also deliver a message approved by the conference expressing sympathy for the Evangelical Church and the Catholic Church in its struggle "against suppression of Christian witness and for training the young in the living faith in Jesus Christ. . . ."

Inquiry Is Split Hopelessly on Reorganization

Deadlocked on 3 Vital Points; Long Delay Now Foreseen.

By the Associated Press.

Chances for swift action on President Roosevelt's program to revamp the executive branch of the Government all but vanished yesterday because of a split among legislators.

Sharp conflict was disclosed when the joint Congressional Committee on Governmental Reorganization made public the record of a three-month series of secret hearings. Committee members have not even approached an agreement on any principal points.

The report strengthened belief that the whole subject would be delayed until next session of Congress.

Three Major Disagreements.

Major disagreements were on expansion of the Civil Service; reorganization of the General Accounting Office, and subordination of independent agencies, such as the Interstate Commerce Commission, to executive departments.

The President's commission which drafted the program had urged the Accounting Office be stripped of its power to veto expenditures and to limit its functions to auditing after the money is spent.

Many committee members, including all Republicans and Democrats, like Byrd, of Virginia, and O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, fought curtailing the Accounting Office's powers.

The same group contended independent commissions should retain their status lest their effectiveness be destroyed by subordination to the regular departments.

Some members also asserted the civil service proposals would shift Congress' control over Government policy to a permanent bureaucracy.

Opposition was expressed, moreover, to giving the President carte blanche authority to effect the reorganization, shuffling and consolidating agencies as he sees fit.

The committee appeared to be most nearly agreed on these sections:

1. Establishment of two new departments—welfare and public works.

2. Appointment of six assistants to the President, to serve as secretaries and contact men with the departments.

Friends of Today Recall Days as War Foes in '14

Members of Diplomatic Corps Reminisce Over Hot Days in July 23 Years Ago When They Were Opposing Each Other.

By Elizabeth Ford.

Many diplomats who are intermingling in social functions in Washington now and during the next couple of weeks can recall the strange fact that once they weren't even on "speaking terms" with each other. Twenty-three years ago a lot of them were in uniform.

The last of July and the first part of August in 1914 were the dog days of the World War . . . and seething hot weather.

Lieut. Col. Emmanuel Lombard, military attache of the French Embassy, remembers that he had just returned from a visit to England.

"I was ordered immediately to my artillery regiment near Paris."

He was Senior Lieut. Lombard then. He already had served in uniform for nine years.

He was stationed at Vincennes. Troops were being mobilized night and day. "The tension was terrific," he says, "but we all had only one thought . . . obey orders and do our duty."

Now an inkwell on his busy desk at the embassy represents Vincennes. Then he points to a paper weight.

"And here is Bar-le-Duc."

On August 12, his division entrained for Bar-le-Duc. It was considerably behind the frontier. Everybody was hoping that the war bubble would be pricked at any minute and that further advance would be unnecessary.

He remembers that the next frenzied days were spent in finding places to quarter the troops, in scouring the countryside for food supplies.

On August 21, he and his regiment were in the midriff of the fighting at Neufchateau on the Belgian frontier. Col. Lombard "stayed with the war." At the battle of the Marne he was promoted to captain. There, under grueling fire, he lost two-thirds of his men. By some whimsey of fate he, himself, was not wounded.

Ambassador from Poland, Count Jerzy Potocki, who ducked the summer doldrums of Washington last week for a trip to Poland was a university man in 1914. He had crammed through law at the universities of Lwow and Oxford. Agricultural studies had sent him as far afield as the University of Halle in Germany.

When the war broke out, he immediately went into service and was marched to the front with the Austrian army. He remained there until 1917.

In January, 1919, he became a captain in the Polish army with the Third Regiment of Uhlans. Shortly after that the general staff sent him galloping off to Budapest as head of the Polish military mission.

In April of the same year he was appointed aide-de-camp to the commander in chief, Marshal Pilsudski and acted in that capacity until the close of 1920. Then his soldering days were over and he packed his uniform and Uhlan lance in moth balls.

When you ask him about his experiences, he says: "Well, you see . . . it was such a long time ago."

The immensely tall and very blond Counselor of the German Embassy, Hans Thomsen, whose wife left town a few days ago for a mid-hot-weather jaunt to the cool rooftops of New York skyscrapers, was in Darnstadt in 1914. "Near Heidelberg, you know."

He had just completed his one year of voluntary military service with a regiment of dragoons—light cavalry. Most of the garrison had friends and relatives in the Rhine town and when they marched out, it was a great occasion. Bands played and handkerchiefs waved.

"I can tell you this," he said with a laugh, "we felt like a very grand lot . . . And then more seriously, "it was something deeper than excitement . . . "

As part of his duties, he rode over the countryside sometimes 60 or 70 miles a day. And the sun was very hot . . . hotter than it is right now on Pennsylvania avenue in a 25-mile-an-hour taxicab . . .

Non-commissioned Officer Thomsen was soon appointed keeper of the regimental "log" and often wrote down the events of the day while still in his saddle. It wasn't long before the dragoons had to leave their horses behind them and take to the trenches. "Which isn't war at all, according to the cavalry."

They got their first fighting at the battle of Erlon, in southern Belgium. Shortly after they were at Liege and Noncom Thomsen found himself on the extreme left wing of the German army at the end of August.

His regiment, which had left Darnstadt so gallantly, suffered heavy losses. A third of them were wiped out before the campaign was over. By the close of the war, they had covered an immense amount of territory and 1918 found them in the Crimea.

Well, just imagine! all this, when we were beginning to think that life began and ended with an electric fan and an air-cooled movie!

Mrs. Mina Hanson Luncheon Guest at Rumanian Legation

The Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Boncesco, who are leaving Washington for Europe within the next ten days, managed to wedge in a little bit of week-end entertaining in the midst of their packing.

Mrs. Mina Hanson, wife of Commander E. William Hanson, of the United States Naval Academy, spent yesterday with them very informally.

"It was too warm to draw up guest lists so we just had Mrs. Hanson and ourselves to luncheon yesterday," said Mme. Boncesco.

Commander Hanson is the officer who "chaperones" the midshipmen on their special cruises hither and yon during their training periods.

The Hansons have been spending their summer back and forth between Annapolis and Newport, with a few weeks in each place, and so it happened that in the midst of one of her Annapolis jaunts, Mrs. Hanson was able to come over to Washington in order to bid the Boncescos "bon voyage."

Women of Army, Navy Union Name Delegates

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Army and Navy Union, Presidents Own Garrison, No. 104, has elected delegates and alternates to the National convention which will be held in Washington, at the Willard Hotel, August 11 to 14. Lady Adjutant Marjorie Sheffield and Mrs. Lucinda Stevenin will serve as delegates and Lady Officer of the Day Mary Holt and Mrs. Della Barber as alternates.

The delegates and alternates were elected at the last regular meeting of the order at which Lady Commander Elizabeth Ellis presided.

Mr., Mrs. Seidenman Return From Cruise

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Seidenman will arrive today in New York on the Pastores, after an 18-day cruise on the Spanish Main.

At Cap-Haitien, Haiti, they motored to Milot to visit the ruins of Sans Souci, the beautiful palace of the black slave, Henri Christophe, who rose to Emperor. Later they made the ascent by horseback to Citadel la Ferriere, which clings to the highest peak of a needle-like mountain rising out of tropical jungle.

Miss Detzer Today Will Urge Enforced Neutrality on Europe

Foreign Delegates to Feminist Meeting Expected to Oppose Proposal of United States Peace League Official.

AN APPEAL for mandatory neutrality will be made by Miss Dorothy Detzer, of Washington, national executive secretary of the United States section of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom at the Ninth International Congress which will open in Luhacovice, Czechoslovakia today. Miss Detzer is expected to meet considerable opposition from European delegates who regard American neutrality as isolationism and believe a policy which would give the President discretion to apply economic pressure to aggressor nations would be a more constructive course.

"The present legislation should not be labeled 'neutrality' legislation. Decent people cannot be 'neutral' in a situation where there is injustice," says Miss Detzer. "The legislation should be called 'embargo' legislation because it looks toward forbidding the kind of trade and financial arrangements which were important factors in pulling the United States into the last war.

"Cruel as this may seem in some situations, in the long run it is probably much more practical than the other way. In the last war, American men went out to die because they honestly believed that they were helping to make the world 'safe for democracy.' War did not bring safety for democracy, nor did it save the world from militarisms. We got something far worse in Hitlerism than obtained in the old German military regime. Now again we find that American boys may be asked to save the world from Fascism. The military method will not do it. Only meeting the problems which create Fascism, and dealing with them intelligently, will help us from that great menace."

In addition to Miss Detzer a delegation of ten American women is attending the Congress. Led by Dr. Gertrude C. Bussey of Baltimore, the group includes Mrs. Lola Maverick Lloyd of Winnetka, Ill., Miss Olive I. Reddick of Frederick, Md., Mrs. Esther Fiske Hammond of Santa Barbara, Calif., Miss Katherine Devereux Blake of New York, Mrs. Mildred Scott Olmsted of Moylan, Pa., Miss Bertha McNeill of Washington, Miss Lucinda Terry of Roanoke, Va., Mrs. Helen Willis Beckel of Huntington, Pa., and Mrs. Joseph E. Friend of New Orleans.

Mrs. Lila Cramer Has Garden Fete

Kappa Gamma Members Are President's Guests.

Mrs. Lila Cramer, president of Gamma Chapter of Kappa Gamma, yesterday afternoon entertained members of her group at a garden party from 5 to 7 at her home, 4900 Hillbrook lane, Spring Valley.

She was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Eva Davis; Miss Mary Lee Vincent, president of Alpha Chapter; Miss Helen Mobberley, president of Beta Chapter, and Miss Mercedes Galbraith, national secretary.

Mrs. Alexander Bentley presided at the tea table in the dining room, and Mrs. Perry Miller at the punch bowl in the garden. Mrs. Bentley wore black lace and Mrs. Miller a frock of yellow chiffon with a large hat to match. Pink and green were the colors carried out in the bouquets of flowers which decorated the tables, and in the refreshments.

The hostess also was assisted by Mrs. Tate Hulsey and Mrs. Mary Malone Moore. Among others present were Miss Louise Farrell, vice president of the chapter; Miss Stella Bryant, secretary; Miss Frances Taylor, Miss Mae Lotham, Mrs. Margaret Hummer, Mrs. Olive Risdon, Miss Gladys Bell, Miss Violet James, Miss Evelyn Ziegler and Miss Kay Carbing.

R. B. Kennedys Touring Virginia

Married at Takoma Park Residence of the Raymond Hills.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Kennedy who now are on a leisurely tour through Virginia, stopping off from time to time to visit spots of historic interest, were married last Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hill, of Takoma Park.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Kennedy was Miss Virginia Rose Hill, daughter of Mrs. Roseanna Stone, of Detroit. Mr. Kennedy is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Kennedy, of Newark, Ohio.

With the bridal party standing before a background of stately palms, graceful ferns and colorful baskets of gladioli, the Rev. Dr. Heber H. Votaw officiated at the ceremony.

The bride wore a long gown of white lace over white satin, made with a high neckline, bell sleeves and flaring skirt with a short train. Her veil of tulle was held in plac with a spray of the traditional orange blossoms and her shower bouquet was of white roses and gypsophilia.

Her attendant, Miss Eleanor Kennedy, sister of the bridegroom, wore a gown of pink lace trimmed with gold and fashioned on princess lines, and carried pink roses.

At the reception which followed immediately after the ceremony, Mrs. Stone, mother of the bride, wore a dress of pale yellow organdy chiffon, with a corsage of pink roses.

The best man was Mr. George Leach, of Takoma Park.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. George Tryon Harding and her daughter, Miss Mary Harding of Columbus, Ohio; Mr. Donald Goley, of Loma Linda, Calif., and Mrs. Edward Pohlman, sister of the bridegroom, from Newark, N. J.

Mr. Kennedy, who is a graduate of the Newark High School in Newark, N. J., plans to enter the University of Maryland where he will continue his studies.

Sail for Europe.

Dr. and Mrs. Wade H. Atkinson and Dr. and Mrs. L. F. Schmeckebier sailed Saturday for a stay of two months in France and England.

Society Flees D. C. for Cool Summer Spots

Belgian, Albanian Envoys Among Those Planning Vacations.

NOW WITH AVIATORS retrieving the North Pole from the social oblivion it has had to endure for lo these many icy eons, people are more and more turning thoughts and heads in northern directions. Or perhaps it isn't the North Pole at all.

It may be Washington's recent tendency to behave just as if it were sitting on top of the equator that is sending everyone out of town in a mad earch for cooler portions of the atlas.

Mrs. Charles I. Corby has just locked the doors of her home on Rockville pike and set foot in Maine for several weeks. Although in recent years she has spent many of her summer months at the "Farm," as the big red brick house with its white stone trimmings is called, her patience gave out when the mercury broke new altitudes. On her way up the coast to Poland Springs, Me., she was joined by Miss Louise Estop in New York.

The Minister of Albania, Faik Konitza, has given notice to the Weather Department that he intends leaving the middle of this week for Swampscott, Mass., where he will remain until the middle of September.

A little farther south—but it still looks nice and north to us—the Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, have taken a cottage at Southampton for the rest of the summer. The Ambassador, himself, however, has been braving a fortnight in tropical Washington, but will return to Southampton as soon as the trains can get him there.

Former Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Ogden L. Mills are at Newport for the yacht races. They sailed in last week-end in their own yacht, Avalon.

Just as ardently interested in sport are Federal Relief Administrator and Mrs. Harry L. Hopkins, who arrive today for the horsey shindigs at Saratoga. They have already been out of Washington for about a month, and have set no definite date for their return, although their apartment at the Kennedy-Warren is waiting for them whenever they should decide to conclude their wanderings.

At Saranac, Mrs. Walter Reilly is in the midst of activities where social whirling is more comfortable and cooler. She entertained at the Inn recently, where, among her guests, were Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Altemus.

The Belo Cottage at Saranac is occupied by the Altemuse, and they are very busy at this time entertaining Mrs. Demott Nee, of Chevy Chase, Md.

Mrs. Louise Friend Joins Alpha Tau Pi

Mrs. Louise Friend, of Alexandria, Va., is among the members just initiated by Alpha Tau Pi women's fraternity of the Fredericksburg State Teachers College, in the summer quarter, and Miss Emmet Day, of Fairfax, is one of the pledges.

Others initiated included Miss Hildrup Wingo, of Drakes Branch, Va.; Miss Dorothy Arritt, of Covington, Va.; Miss Margaret Buchanan, of Marion, Va.; Miss Mildred Grimes, of South Norfolk, Va.; Miss Ethel Cadmus, of Portsmouth, Va.; Miss Mary Elizabeth Morecock, of Halifax, N. C.; Miss Fannie Lou Apperson, of Culpeper, Va.

Also Miss Margaret Haynie, of Irvington, Va.; Miss Addibel Freeman, of this city; and Miss Helen Buckley, of Clifton Station, Va. The third degree was given to Miss Frances Liebenow, of Fredericksburg and Miss India Faulconer, of Orange.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Unable to Forget Girl With Whom He Had Extra-Marital Affair, Despondent Husband Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My story is the old triangle riddle. I have been married eight years. I am very pleased with my wife from every angle. She is economical and a fine mother to our little girl. She is kind, affectionate and scrupulously upright and moral. She is truthful and decent. And all this is in hopeless contrast to me.

* * * *

Although I am well liked and pass for a good fellow, my character is not what it should be, I suppose. For, notwithstanding the fact that I have a wife as good as they come, I was not above letting myself fall headlong in love with a girl in her teens. That was five years ago. I was then 25. We had an affair which lasted four years—until a year ago; when she left the city. She has been gone a year now and we haven't corresponded—thinking that time and separation would kill remembrances.

* * * *

But for the life of me I can't forget this girl. Everything reminds me of her. Consequently, I am never in a good mood. I have as little as possible to say to people. I don't enjoy the movies and going places any more. The people in the office where I work have noticed that something is wrong with me. Sometimes I take hold of myself and force a convivial spirit when I am among friends, but it is with such immense effort that when I get by myself again it is a temporary relief. I say "temporary" because after a little while my thoughts get the better of me and I go black in despair.

All this after a year's separation and a tremendous effort to forget. I have used the vicarious method of redoubling my attentions to my wife and little girl. I lavish all the little kindnesses and gentlenesses on them that I am capable of. My wife appreciates all I do and I am glad that she is happy. But yet I am, unknown to them, the most wretched man alive. What is a man to do is a case like this? For verily I believe I am headed for St. Elizabeths. I would not and could not hurt my wife; so divorce is out of the question.

ANONYMOUS.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR ANONYMOUS—If you have reason to believe that your morbid introspection, if not speedily corrected, may land you in an institution, surely the wise thing to do—while there is still time—is to consult a physician. Why not talk with Dr. Elmer Klein, of the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road northwest; telephone ADams 1033? It's possible that a change of occupation and residence—a change that would take you to another city, into a brand-new social and occupational environment which offers no reminders of your association with the girl—would help you forget and readjust to the present.

* * * *

What you need as much as anything else, probably, is to get the whole story off your chest, in minute and self-accusatory detail, to an impersonally receptive listener; one who has the intelligence, wisdom and scientific understanding to give you constructive counsel after grasping the whole picture. Such mental catharsis often has great psychotherapeutic value in that it effectively lances and drains festered emotional states. M. H.

Friend for "AT."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH—I am a young man in my latter twenties. I read your advice every morning and am particularly interested in the letter from "A. T.," published July 22, in which she tells of being "crazed with loneliness." I am serious in saying I should like to help her, and I am sure that I can if she will let me. I belong to one of the oldest families in Washington and, I think, one of the best. I am not married, have many friends and a car, and enjoy motoring and all sports. Also, I might mention that I have a good position with a well-known local firm.

* * * *

This proposition may be entirely out of order, but I would like to make this young woman's acquaintance, possibly through you, if that meets with her approval. I feel sure I can do a great deal for her; even to helping her land a job if she is the kind of person I think she is. You see, I have some swell friends she could meet and thus forget her worries . . . I might add that if "A. T." did go to church, it would help. I know! Hoping for a speedy reply, because I think this girl badly needs help, I remain,

FAITHFUL READER.

* * * *

DEAR FAITHFUL READER—Your offer sounds generous to a degree. If you are all that you seem to be, I think it might be a splendid thing for "A. T." to make your acquaintance. However, before I would feel justified in negotiating an introduction (supposing the idea appeals to "A. T.") I would first have to have met both of you personally, and would have to be supplied with altogether acceptable credentials from each. If I hear from "A. T." in response to this (since she did not give her name), I shall get in touch with you directly, and we shall see what can be done. In any event, thank you for your kindly thought. M. H.

Child's Curiosity Merits True Reply On 'Facts of Life'

New York (AP).—Here's advice straight from London on how to teach your child the facts of life.

When he first asks "where did baby sister come from," tell him the truth, for never again will he be so uninhibited.

That is the word of Dr. Susan Isaacs, head of the department of child development at the University of London, who recently crossed the United States on her way to Australia.

"The three or 4-year-old who expresses his natural curiosity should be answered quite definitely," says Dr. Isaacs.

"Putting him off will only make him more curious. Everything his mother tells him should be the truth, for if it is not, he will believe the exaggerated stories he hears from his school friends later on. And he'll never again bring his questions to his mother."

The physiology of child-bearing can be explained easily to even a three-year-old, the lecturer holds. Let him know where the embryo develops, so that he will understand the mother's part in reproduction.

The father's part will be more difficult to explain, but he probably will not be curious about it until he is close to adolescence.

But don't force your child, if he does not ask these questions, warns Dr. Isaacs. Let him come to that stage in development naturally.

New Fall Hats Are Tall, Dashing, Easy to Wear

The casual hat (below), of black felt, trimmed with French suede in a smart shade of sulphur, emphasizes the trend toward height in millinery. With dashing upsweeping crown, the model at right is a forerunner of the 1900 influence in fall and winter fashions. It is of bright navy felt with navy ribbon band and streamers, dotted in white wax.

Skyrocket Hat Leads Autumn Style Picture

New Tall Models Found Smart and Wearable.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

GET PREPARED to don skyrocketing hats again, as they are definitely leading the fall millinery fashion picture. A consoling fact, however, particularly to women who found difficult the tall hats of last season, is that the new creations are as wearable as they are smart. Brims lead the height trend for fall, rather than crowns as of last winter, although crowns, too, are rising to great heights and in many cases both crowns and brims feature towering trends.

While there are decided style modes in the new millinery, the collections are so diversified that one can be individual in choice of head covering and still be in tune with fashion. Turbans, for instance, which gained unprecedented popularity this summer, are still considered smart; the latest versions, however, are wound spirally and built for height rather than for hugging the head closely in the conventional styling. Another interesting type of turban has height and flares at the top, giving width as well as height to the hat.

Back to Turn of Century.

The 1900 influence, dominant in the fall and winter collections, started by Schiaparelli, and now accepted on both sides of the Atlantic, is one of the most important trends in millinery. It not only emphasizes a high, dashing line, but is one of the best examples of the "profile" hat, which it is predicted will be very important throughout the oncoming seasons. There are varied interpretations of this flattering style, which makes it adaptable to all ages and faces.

Breton sailors are appearing in exaggerated versions, with height introduced in the brim, giving a wide and high bowl-like effect; these are usually worn back on the head. Pill box hats have also reappeared to top fall and winter costumes; they are much the same shape as in their original styling, but are given the illusion of height by sophisticated looking bows perched on top. Berets (they have become a staple in millinery), are again on the scene, giving all other styles keen competition because they are so chic and so generally wearable. The main consideration in the fall beret is the way it is worn—high up on one side rather than down over one eye as formerly.

The New Casual Hat.

For the casual hat, of which there should be at least one in every a rather wide sweep of brim (not wardrobe, the newest types flaunt high), and exotic crowns featuring height. Many of these crowns are square in shape, but may be manipulated to suit the wearer; some have long quills as a decorative medium, others center interest on complicated grosgrain bands of contrasting color. The calot (skull cap), which attained much popularity this summer, is appearing as a cocktail hat, with high flaring bows of self-material placed directly in front; these are worn back on the head.

The hat materials range through velvets, velours, French suede, novelty fabrics and felts. Velour and felt are often combined with velvet for smart effect. Black is the leading color, with blues, rust, brown and green sharing equal honors. The color in millinery for fall and winter, will, however, be guided by the costume; the smartest idea is to match the ensemble in color rather than to contrast it.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 25.

ONE of the things about this municipal showcase which always gives me a faint tremor of amusement is the way contest winners from all over the country, usually feminine, are given as a prize a trip to this town, much as a deserving child is taken to the zoo on Saturday afternoon. And I must admit there is a certain similarity.

ALICE HUGHES.

The latest of these to meet my eye is a young lady named Lucinda Susan Baker who comes from the Arizona State Teachers' College in the thriving town of Flagstaff. Miss Baker hurled herself into a contest which offered as first prize a trip to Gotham, for the best essay written by a college undergraduate. Lucinda took for subject "Is New York a Vital Part of My Culture?" Perhaps the first two sentences will give you an idea.

"New York! (The very name brings a picture of a sky-searching line of buildings against the horizon, and light dancing in living spots in the gorgeous streets.) What could New York do for me now, when I am young and have begun to send down roots, like a hungry tree, into the rich earth of home?" That is an extremely rough idea.

* * * *

Well what did New York do for her? Here are a few items. It took her to the Radio City Music Hall, to morning service at the Riverside Church built by Rockefeller oil money; to that great cultural center, Coney Island; to a broadcasting studio; to that thrilling Mecca, our botanical gardens; to the remote and deserted top of the Empire State Building, and finally to the Grand Central Depot, which shot her back to Flagstaff.

* * * *

Well, Miss Lucinda wrote her piece, and won her trip to this mad metropolis. I am now awaiting a personal report on the present state of her culture.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—My favorite club, of which I am an ex-officio member, has had its summer meeting, and did we have fun in our quaint "follies" way! The Ziegfeld Girls' Club held their summer session at the Palisades Amusement Park, just across the Hudson on the Jersey side. With Doris Vinton as hostess, we spent the afternoon dabbling our tootsies in the big salt water pool, dined at the park, and then dared fate on the various tummy-jouncing rides of the place. All the young mothers of the club brought their kids, and for all that these girls were once the most glamorous and sought after dolls in town, they behaved just as matronly and suburban as though the nearest they had ever come to the Follies was the fifteenth row, behind a post.

* * * *

The past ten years have seen a great change in one feminine trait. Today I never hear women boasting that they do not wear corsets or girdles. Obviously, they all do. Today's sausage-skin styles forbid the slightest appearance of a seam or bulge, and since nature has never been quite that smooth, a girdle is required. Not even the movie stars whose high art demands the utmost perfection of figures, can yet dispense with the girdle. Dietrich, Crawford and even the thinnest of the glamour girl gang still bind themselves at the derriere. It seems to me, that, owing to the demands of modern fashion, this utter dependence on corsetting is the last stand of our sex's slavery.

Merry Motif for Busy Needle Is Plump and Saucy Bluebird

By Alice Brooks.

PLUMP BLUEBIRDS—the saucy songsters—prove merry motifs for embroidery needles! They suggest a dozen uses, for they're sure to bring beauty to pillows or refreshment linens, to guest towels, scarfs or even corners of your curtains. Work the birds in simple 10-to-the-inch crosses with a bit of outline and lazy daisy stitch, using varied colors. In pattern 5756 you will find a transfer pattern of two motifs 5x10¾ inches; two motifs 6x9¼ inches; two motifs 4½x5 inches and two and two reverse motifs 4x5 inches; illustrations of the stitches needed; material requirements; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

The GENTLER SEX

By Melvina Lindsay.

Madame President

(A Candidate's Soliloquy)

If I should ever be elected President,
I would do something about a lot of things
That are commonly neglected by Congress,
And other masculine bodies.

I would jail all manufacturers and, incidentally, dressmakers,
Who do not sew on hooks, eyes, buttons and snappers,
To stay put.
Also all saleswomen who insisted that "getting used" to a hat,
Made it becoming.

I would demand an umbrella that really stayed shut,
A slip that did not sag at the sides nor pull up over the knees,
Also better elastic in panties;
And a shoe that was comfortable yet also had dash,
Yet was priced within reason.

II.

Like Louis XIV, I would have a garden of hangings,
And sentence there certain aggressive ladies
Who make themselves general nuisances,
At all public gatherings.

I would string up to the highest oak tree
Dominant dowagers who corner hostesses and guests of honor,
For long-winded chatter,
And hold up lines of departing visitors,
At teas and receptions.

I would ruthlessly assign to a similar fate
Feminine nitwits who ask that everything be re-explained,
After a motion is stated;
Also women who make amendments to amendments,
And further delay the adjourning.

III.

I would take the beauty shop situation firmly in hand,
And do something about the Forgotten Woman
Who is left under the drier until her tresses
Are baked to straw.

I would crack down on superior "exotic" barbers
Who haughtily insist on thinning your hair,
With flashing razors,
Until you resemble a cat with the mange,
Yet are told you are very "Parisian."

I would fire all operators who snooted suggestions from patrons,
And I would make laws prohibiting sadistic manicurists
From cuticle gouging;
Also I would prohibit long bobs on old ladies,
And permanents on "kiddies."

IV.

Yes, if I were ever elected President,
I would make life a lot easier for everybody,
Including men, by getting a lot of things
Out of my system.

I would banish to some far-off forgotten waste
Chatty women who stand in the doors of street cars and buses,
Or at bank windows,
Ticket offices, shop counters, everywhere that people foregather,
Asking aimless, long-winded questions.

I would draw up a rigid code for all ladies' rest rooms,
Giving quotas of minutes for use of the mirrors,
And instill the rules of good cricket
Into all women who merge with their kind,
In so-called civilized places.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Parasites and Scabies.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

On June 20, 250 years ago, an Italian named Cosimo Bonomo discovered that the cause of the common itchy eruption of the skin was due to a small spiderlike insect, the parasite of scabies. This discovery was of an importance far transcending its intrinsic value, because for the first time it was proved that a human disease was due to entrance into the body of something from the external world.

The ideas that were prevalent at that time were that disease was due to changes in the chemistry of the blood or to the dislocation of the theoretical four humours of the body. That an insect, or plant, or poison from outside could enter into the body and make changes was, curiously enough, never given serious consideration. And, indeed, it was not until much later—in 1834—that Bonomo's idea gained any wide popularity.

Demonstrates to Professor.

This was when Renucci, a medical student in Paris, showed the great professor of skin diseases there what he had learned from the old market women in his native Corsica. Renucci remembered seeing these old women pick the itchy places on their fingers with a needle until they extracted a small wriggling insect, and when he saw the same disease in the clinic he demonstrated to the professor that it was a scabies insect which caused the eruption.

Scabies, or the itch, is supposed to be a disease of filth and poverty, but it frequently appears among those who are known as the upper classes. It occurs most frequently in the thin skin between the fingers, although it may appear on any part of the body. I have known of cases that were treated for all manner of internal disorders for many weeks before the actual nature of the eruption was recognized. It was thought that because the patient was a member of the well-to-do classes in high society that it impossible for the itch to attack him. The application of sulphur ointment in a few days ended not only the annoying itching and the eruption, but also the idea that it was due to allergy, or hypersensitiveness, or eczema.

Washable Window Shades Will Withstand Showers

A sudden shower on an apparently bright, sunny day can do great damage to delicate drapes when windows are left open, but there is little to worry about in connection with the window shades, if they are of the washable type. One of the popular shades now on the market is of fabric impregnated with pyroxylin, which is not affected by rain or dirty fingers, inasmuch as it can be scrubbed with soap and water.

Oil Advocated For Relaxing, Soothing Bath

Newer Than Salts and Adds Fragrance to Cleansing Tub.

By Carolyn Abbott.

THIS YEAR the simple bath has received more attention from cosmeticians than it has for many seasons. It is no longer enough for you to step into a freshly drawn tub of warm or hot water, as your choice may be, soap yourself with your favorite toilet soap, loll awhile if you wish, and then climb out again.

You will get a more cleansing, soothing, altogether relaxing tub bath if you add some perfumed water softener or oil, in liquid form, salts or powder.

Bath oils are newer than bath salts. They may not be so efficient as water softeners, but they are grand for fragrance. Don't just sprinkle in the oil after the water is drawn. To get the last whiff of sweetness out of oil, shake a few drops into the tub, just underneath the faucet, then turn on the water full strength. The force of the stream breaks up the oil and distributes the fragrance throughout the entire tub. This type of bath perfume comes in a wide variety of scents, including pine, Oriental blends and flowery mixtures.

When you are taking a bath to make you feel momentarily rich, beautiful and cherished, by all means perfume it. There are powders, meals and salts and oils in many woodsy aromas and in lilac, jasmine or 'most any scent that you may be especially fond of.

Morning Bracer.

For a morning bracer more and more women are taking a tip from men by starting the day with a tingling, bracing shower. It is speedy, cooling, and one of the best substitutes for a dip in a refreshing lake or pool.

You may come from a quick shower as fragrantly fresh as if you had lolled languidly in the tub. Try a dash of bath oil at the crook of the elbow, behind the ear or on the washcloth before you step into the shower. If the bath oil is highly concentrated, a little goes a long way. It is almost as poignant as perfume and less expensive. After your shower, match your bath oil scent with your eau de cologne, putting it on your shoulders, your back, your thighs, to retain the coolness of the shower for some time.

Skirts Shorter In Fall Fashions

New York (AP).—Fall fashion openings are in full swing. Here are some of the high lights:

Brief skirts for daytime. Many are 15 inches from the ground.

The "corselet" panel, molded to the figure above the waist, like the Duchess of Windsor's wedding gown.

Many elbow or just-below-the-elbow sleeves for daytime, slightly squared at the shoulder, and little close-fitting, long-sleeved jackets over short-sleeved dresses, giving a suit effect.

The low, curved empire decolletage for evening.

Higher crowned hats with taller feathers.

Tall-crowned black hats already are replacing cut-out white turbans in New York, and there are many black dresses.

Much black is displayed at all the fall fabric shows, both for day and evening, but there also are many greens, rusts and a whole range of reds.

Bob Burns Says:

I was just readin' a book some fella wrote on how to be a public speaker. It seems to me he's left out the most important item and that is when to stop the speech.

I'll never forget the time one of them lecturers come down home. The whole town turned out to hear him and he was pretty good for a while, but he kept on talkin' and talkin' and after while the people started to fidget around and finally when the audience was just about exhausted, the man says, "Now, before I stop, let me quote those immortal words of Webster."

Uncle Hink nudged my aunt and says, "Come on, Maw, let's get out of here—he's gonna start in on the dictionary now!"

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Ready, Aim . . .

If Treasury Department agents have to shoot Secretary Morgenthau evidently wants them to get their man. That the agents should qualify as marksmen was one of the Secretary's early orders. Now arrangements have been made to hold small arms competition on the Camp Simms range of the District National Guard August 10 and 11.

The winning team in the matches will receive a silver cup awarded by the Secretary, and the outstanding individual marksmen will get gold, silver and bronze medals.

For the first time, the training program will involve the selection of a six-man team to represent the Treasury Department in the national championship matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, August 22 to September 11.

The matches here will be participated in by members of the Secret Service, Bureau of Customs, Bureau of Narcotics, Alcohol Tax Unit, White House Police, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Treasury Guards and the Bureau of the Mint. Last year's winning individual, E. L. Ballinger, of the Customs Border Patrol at El Paso, Tex.—who shot a score of 281 out of a possible 300—will be among the 1937 competitors.

The Interior Department Recreation Association, now being organized, has sponsored no affair to date. When, on July 23, we stated that, "Interior employes are still talking about the congeniality evinced at the Potomac Boat Club the other night," that was correct, for they still are. Credit, however, for sponsoring that affair should have been given to the Interior branch, NFFE, Local No. 2.

Concerning Beauty

The stark materialism that is supposed to be a part of the lives of Uncle Sam's collectors of revenue was considered by the agents recently upon receipt of a protest against an assessment of manufacturers' excise tax on a product of a jewelry designer. The article in contest was a globe of fine gold, embellished and made to symbolize the world travels of a moderately well known writer and poet. To quote from the protest:

"The creation is a plain and distinct interpretation in an abstract form of sentiment, scientific observation and the emotional sensation of a poem purely created for Idealism. It is purely a manifestation of a deep soul with symbols of imagination to commemorate the poetic and abstract impulses that only great genius of art possesses. The artist, in this instance employed precious metal in shape and color to symbolize a meaning, everlasting and pure, and with the proper arrangement has made an undying concept of a poem," and so on.

Then: "I beg you to give this appeal deep consideration, and to exempt the tax action on the ground that this creation is not an article that could be merchandized, and in the artist's mind could not be counted under any circumstances as such, as it is an individual creation of art, truly an abstract concept and the precious metal stands for purity and poetic symbols."

Now add beauty to the loopholes in the law.

Whoop-la

There'll be a hot time in the vicinity of You and Tea streets Friday and Saturday nights, August 6 and 7, when the United Government Employes hurl a victory block party in celebration of $200 Federal pay increase for National Park Service and War Department laundry workers.

In the whirling, churning whirligig, there will be swing bands, dancing, refreshments and prizes. Committees on arrangements consist of several hundred people. The committee heads are Mrs. Elizabeth H. McDuffie, gifts and prizes; Capt. G. B. J. Keys, citizens host committee; Benjamin F. Bomar, social; George H. Smackum, merchants' committee; J. H. Burns, grounds and lights; Miss R. E. Cooper, refreshments, cakes and pastry; Arthur A. Moore, special committee; Thomas Delaney, ushers committee; Miss Mildred Dawson and Beckwith Akers, block party memberships committee; Miss Eva Venture, first aid committee; Lynn V. Hooe and Miss M. Gary, special features committee, and Miss Evelyn Overton, president, Baltimore Unit, U. G. E.

Income tax agents who date back to 1929 may remember stout, bespectacled Barnett H. Fischer, who left the service on December 31, 1929. He was in town the other day, relating how he was now the head man in a firm of accountants, auditors and tax counselors in Chicago.

The F. C. A. people say that you will serve your own convenience—and also facilitate the F. C. A.'s work—by using, whenever possible, one of the two new rapid elevators on the east side of the building instead of the single remaining old elevator on the west side. Little things like this help all.

400 Girl Scouts Are 'Pioneering' By Day in 5 Woodland Camps Around District's Rim, But Sleep Comfortably at Home at Night

Almost 400 Washington Girl Scouts are "pioneering" this summer in five day-camps scattered in shaded out-of-the-way spots around the edge of the District.

In a way, it's more fun than going to Camp May Flather, the big summer vacation place of the Scouts at Mount Solon, Va. The girls only have to be pioneers from 9 a. m. until 3:30 p. m., and even during that time they can be artists, musicians, archers, dramatists, or gardeners. At nights, they're back home and ready to join in family or community activities.

The newest of the day-camps is at Greenleaf Point, down near the Corinthian Yacht Club. (It was Buzzards Point before the girls went down two weeks ago, and decided a new name would be better.) Between 35 and 40 girls are learning scoutcraft there.

Clearing the Ground.

There was some bewilderment when the girls first decided to "move in"—for the point didn't seem to have much extra room. Cleared room, that is. But the girls were not looking for cleared room. They wanted the underbrush and the trees and the weeds. Establishing a camp there would mean something.

The Potomac Electric Power Co., their nearest neighbor, became enthusiastic. It sent men to help with the clearance, sent some sand, and then pitched in and built an out-of-doors bathroom—plumbing and all. The yacht club was not to be outdone, and told the girls they could hold their art classes on its lawns.

Nothing could suit a Girl Scout artist better than the boat and river view seen from the club grounds. Under the huge honey locusts they splash bright colors to their hearts' content, saving the best of their output for the exhibit which all the camps are to have when the season is ended.

Camp Cook Candidacies.

All girls are not artists. Some of them want to be cooks, especially camp cooks; for then they stand a better chance of getting to go on the overnight hikes for which Girl Scouts are famous. If you are inclined to think camp cooking might be easy, just look at all the things the girls know how to cook on sticks:

Apricot marshmallow toast, honey butter toast, cinnamon toast, bacon toast, toasted sandwiches, apple some mores, banana boats, mock-angel food, cheese-jam-bacon bread twists, gingerbread twirls, kabos, angels on horseback and hamburgers. All that without a pan!

During "quiet hours" the girls have music appreciation, provided by a portable victrola, good records, and a teacher who explains. Craft classes in which hobies are pursued are held throughout the day. There is much nature work, and many of the camp periods end with dramatics—this, of course, after the place has been "swept and dusted."

Costumes for the dramatic presentations are made by the girls from material at hand. At Camp Greenleaf they did not worry at all, for the long locust beans can be used for a multitude of purposes. Best of all, the girls think, they can make tails for Mary's lambs—which have become standby camp characters.

Each Camp Specializes.

Although the program in each camp is much the same, each has its own specialty. At Greenleaf, the girls have the leading art class—because they have the most colorful scene to paint. At the Arlintgon camp, marionettes are featured. At Fort Kemble Park, archery and nature study hold first places. The crafts and cookery are stressed at Jessup Blair Camp, while the Langdon Park group goes in big for gardening.

The camps are scattered about so as to be near their "constituents." Many of the girls wear their green uniforms. Although this is not a requirement, it aids the general "Robin Hood" effect.

Workers and directors in charge of the camps include: Miss Katherine Carter, Mrs. Ruth Doherty, Miss Helen Newman, Miss Edward Webster, Mrs. Chauncey Cook, Mrs. Fred Walker, Mrs. Ira Clarke and Mrs. Ann Comer. Hugh Collins, art director for the camps, was obtained from the WPA, with the special aid of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Hearings Wednesday to Climax 2-Year-Old Drive.

25-Year Retirement to Include Police Also Coming Up.

Climaxing a drive begun two years ago by the Fire Fighters' Association, hearings will begin Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock on two bills introduced by Mrs. Virginia Jenckes calling for a five day week for firemen and for a 25-year retirement pension for local police and firemen.

Mrs. Jenckes, author of both bills, introduced the proposal for retirement of policemen and firemen, and also United States park police and White House police, last March 16.

Offered as an amendment to the appropriations bill for the District, it calls for retirement of all police and firemen here after 25 years' service on a pay basis of 50 per cent of the salary received at time of retirement. Retirement is not compulsory.

The second bill, introduced June 29, provides for shorter hours for firemen. It specifies a five-day week with both days off to follow consecutively. This is granted in addition to annual leave and sick leave now allowed by law.

This second bill further calls for a 70-hour week on night platoon duty and a 50-hour week on day platoon duty. Men who work on legal holidays shall be allowed compensatory time off for such work, the bill provides. One clause permits fire chiefs to keep men on duty during emergencies, the extra time to be paid off later.

Taking of hearings on the firemen's 5-day week bill follows a drive of two years, largely backed by the Fire Fighters Association, made up of firemen in the District.

At present day shift firemen work 10 hours a day, night shift men 14. Every other Saturday the firemen work a 24-hour trick. At present the men are granted one day off each week.

Chairman Vincent Palmisano, of the District of Columbia Committee of the House of Representatives, has designated Mrs. Jenckes as chairman of a sub-committee to take testimony on the two proposed bills.

Others on the sub-committee announced yesterday, are Representative George J. Bates, of Massachusetts, and Representative Reuben Wood, of Missouri.

Plans Hurried For Bethesda Cancer Center

Actual Construction to Begin in Less Than 3 Months.

With Bethesda selected as a site, architects said yesterday plans were being rushed for a new $3,500,000 cancer research institute, authorized by Congress last week.

Bids for construction of the first three buildings will be asked in about eight weeks. A month later architects will have completed their drawings and work will commence.

Plans already are more than half completed, according to Dr. L. R. Thompson, of the Public Health Service. Leaders had anticipated the Congressional action and went ahead with plans before any money was available.

Site of the hospital and laboratory is a section of the estate of the late Luke Wilson, who died of cancer a week after donating 45 acres for the center near Bethesda.

While the House authorized $750,000 as an initial expenditure for building the hospital, and added $700,000 a year for running costs, it was expected that total cost of construction would reach $3,500,000.

If larger grounds are needed, the wish of Mr. Wilson and his family was that more land should be given to the United States Public Health Service, which will operate the institute. Individuals are requested to contribute to the center.

At present, considerable emphasis will be directed into the field of radiology, it was indicated. Purchase of 10 grams a year of radium, at $20,000 a gram, was proposed. This would be made available to State institutions which have none of the rare element.

Bethesda will become one of the greatest health and research centers in the world, when present plans materialize. First three buildings on the Wilson estate will be devoted to cancer. Later the center is expected to embrace other health studies in additional laboratories.

Mr. Wilson told Dr. Thompson months ago that if Congress would raise the money, he would give a third of his estate for a site. Mr. Wilson did not dream at the time of such an elaborate establishment. He expected the institute to cost around $100,000.

Congressional action undoubtedly was influenced by the death last Monday of the man who offered the land. Congressional committees knew the story of his offer and his death, and they lost little time in putting through a large appropriation.

"The fight against cancer must be won," Dr. Thompson said yesterday. "And it will be won when the cancer center is established and operating."

Cleric Accepts Call.

Otto Sontagg Hurt By Fall in Home

Otto "Tag" Sontagg, 74, retired District policeman, was seriously injured last night by a fall in his home at 906 Delafield place northwest. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where he was believed to have a fractured skull.

Miss Anna Shicht, a neighbor, who lives at 902 Delafield place, told police she had been standing in her front yard when she heard a thudding noise in Sontagg's home. She rushed over, looked in a window and saw him lying on the floor.

Sontagg was formerly attached to the old No. 6 Precinct, now No. 1, as clerk and later in charge of the patrol wagon. He retired five years ago after 40 years' active service in the department.

Colored Youths May Remain in Md. University

Attorney General Rules 2 Now There May Not Be Evicted.

Baltimore, July 25 (AP).—Attorney General O'Conor ruled today two colored students could not be evicted from the University of Maryland law school, in reply to a query from Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university.

O'Conor explained the Legislature two years ago adopted a scholarship program to provide for the higher education of Maryland colored people outside the State, and repealed it in 1937 with new provisions.

The new section, he said, provides "scholarships for Negroes who cannot obtain the desired courses in existing Negro institutions in this State."

The two youths applied for admission to the law school before the effective date of the new statute, he said, and were admitted on court decisions. He added:

"The question, therefore, is whether the new scholarship statute confers authority upon the university to oust students and require them to apply for the scholarship provisions out of the State, or whether it shall be applied only to new applicants.

"In our judgment, this statute may be given no retroactive effect."

Religion Basis Of Spain's War, Priest Claims

Rev. Sancho Relates Horrors at Catholic University.

The war in spain is a religious war, the Very Rev. Sylvester Sancho, O. P., told priests, nuns and summer students at Catholic University last night.

Father Sancho, who visited Gen. Francisco Franco in Spain and saw the fall of Bilbao, is on his way to Manila, where he is rector of the University of St. Thomas, oldest institution of higher learning under the American flag.

"This war is to be considered as a religious war," Father Sancho said. "It is camouflage to say that it is economic, or that it is aimed at the great landowners.

"It is a war of two civilizations—Christian and atheistic. In every part of the world, Communists, anarchists and the Godless are on the side of the so-called loyalists. Why is this? If it is not religion, why their interest."

He said that 17,000 priests—40 per cent of the Spanish clergy and 5,000 nuns were killed. Twenty-eight thousand churches, convents and chapels had been destroyed, he said, some of them dating back as far as the eighth century.

Father Sancho declared that in Barcelona, Communists dug up the coffins of nuns.

"They played football with the skulls," he added.

Loyalist planes bombed Saragosse, his home, he said, and killed 113 persons. "I saw a nurse walking along the street with a little 5-year-old girl. A bomb exploded near them. When the dust cleared away, the nurse was holding only a hand."

Telling about his visit to Gen. Franco, Father Sancho explained that the general's brother-in-law is a friend of the Sancho family.

"Gen. Franco is probably the best military officer in Europe," he said. "He is a gentleman and a good Catholic. He goes to mass every day and says his rosary with his wife and daughter every afternoon."

Father Sancho, who was introduced by Father Ignatius Smith, asked his audience to pray not for Franco's cause, but for the loyalists—that they might be "enlightened."

Tom Mix, in D. C. With Circus, Would Like to Go Sightseeing

Cowboy Screen Star, Whose Show Will Be Here 3 Days, Always Too Busy to Tour City on Previous Visits.

Tom Mix, cow-punching hero of millions of movie fans, admitted yesterday there is one adventure that a career of hair-raising experiences has not brought him—and that is a sightseeing trip through the Nation's Capital.

"I've wanted to do it all my life," he confided yesterday as he arrived for the performance here of his Tom Mix circus.

The man who made a horse named Tony famous settled back in a folding lounge chair in the tent where he greets an ever-faithful public, and listed all the historic spots and public places he has dreamed about for years—and never has seen.

Sightseeing Tour.

"I've been here several times, in and out—but never for a long enough time to look around."

Mix said he meant this. "What I want is about a month. Why—they tell me that the Treasury Department is a most interesting place to see—and the Department of Justice—I'm told that is very exciting.

"But what I really want to do is sit in the gallery of Congress and watch the goings-on there—to see if the Representatives and Senators are as funny as they are cracked up to be. Personally I don't think they are."

Mix's show opens tonight, and will run for three days on the grounds at Bennings road and Twenty-fifth street northeast. So he doesn't think he'll find much time for looking around the city.

Will Meet Hoover.

He is sure of one thing—a chat with J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. And that will be a great treat because Mix carries a badge designating him as one of Hoover's deputy marshals. The whole business of criminology is interesting to Mix, and he says he likes to chase bandits, off the silver screen, as well as on.

Mix made his first visit to the Capital as a volunteer in the Spanish-American War. He was stationed at the barracks at the foot of Fourth street for a week. But before he had a chance to get around the city, his company was sent to Florida.

On a later visit he did get to the White House. He rode Tony over the lawn there for President Coolidge and delegates to a veterans gathering here.

Mix said he would take time out from his duties to see President Roosevelt—whenever the President can see him. He wants to present the Chief Executive with one of his ten-gallon hats.

Two Colored Men Killed in Quarrels

Fights, one a lover's quarrel and the other over 10 cents, resulted in the death of two colored men early yesterday.

William Watson, colored, 30, of 404 I street northwest, was dead upon the arrival of a Casualty Hospital doctor after he was stabbed in the chest at a house in the 700 block Fourth street northwest.

Detectives arrested Marie Collier, colored, 24, of 300 block Ford's court northwest, and held her at the Women's Bureau in connection with the death. They said the woman and man had quarreled. She will appear before a coroner's jury this morning.

An unidentified colored man was shot to death in front of an ice cream store in the 1800 block of Seventh street northwest, in what police said was an altercation over a dime.

The dead man's assailant, known to police, has not been apprehended.

Meanwhile, 95 stitches were required to close razor gashes suffered by Henry Green, colored, 43, of 1330 Cedar court northwest. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Police said the wounds were inflicted by another colored man in a fight in Green's home.

Rep. Crosser's Son Dies in Cleveland

James Crosser, 21, son of Robert Crosser, Democratic Representative from Ohio, died yesterday in a Cleveland, Ohio, hospital, it was learned here last night from Representative Crosser's secretary, George R. Stewart.

Mr. Crosser had been ill for some time. His father left Washington last Friday, and was there when he died. Other survivors are his mother, Mrs. Isabelle Crosser; a brother, Robert, and two sisters, Barbara Crosser, of Cleveland, and Mrs. Justine Sweeny, whose husband, Charles A. Sweeny, is an attorney for the Federal Trade Commission here.

Mr. Crosser had lived in Washington at intervals for several years, and four years ago was graduated with honors from Central High School here.

Funeral services are to be in Cleveland tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

West Coast Is Building Star Names for 1938

Newcomers to Films Will Be Given Every Chance to Prove Worth.

Hollywood, July 25.

With the beginning of the new film year, in August, speculation is rife as to the new stellar personalities due to scale the cinematic heights during the next 12 months.

The record of the past year is impressive, with Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Simone Simon and Sonja Henie among the personalities who attained top favor with American audiences in that time.

Two established screen actresses from Europe are due to make their first pictures under American auspices early in the new season. Annabella, whom American audiences have seen in two British-made pictures, "Wings Of The Morning" and "Under The Red Robe," shortly will come to Hollywood to star opposite William Powell in "Jean." and Gracie Fields, the "highest paid actress in the world," already is at work in England under supervision of Hollywood production experts making "He Was Her Man" for Twentieth Century-Fox. Afterward, she will come to Hollywood.

Rising Musical Star.

Right at the start of the new film year, a pretty American girl is making her big bid for stellar honors. She is Phyllis Brooks, who will be seen in "You Can't Have Everything," new Twentieth Century-Fox musical comedy. On the basis of her work in that picture, not yet released, she has been assigned important roles in "Life Begins In College," another musical comedy, and "In Old Chicago," Darryl Zanuck's major production for the new season.

It is almost a foregone conclusion that the pulchritudinous and talented Phyllis will see her name "in the lights" before the year is over. It is her second try at films, the girl having left Hollywood for the stage after becoming dissatisfied with her progress after three pictures. She was placed under contract by Twentieth Century-Fox while playing the feminine second lead in the New York play, "Stage Door," and there is every indication that she will not again have occasion to leave Hollywood.

Otherwise, Gypsy Rose!

Another newcomer to the screen for whom great things are forecast is Louise Hovick, the dark-eyed, intriguing young stage actress who came to Hollywood after winning top place as an attraction in the "Follies." As in the case of Phyllis Brooks, Louise made such a good showing in her first role for "You Can't Have Everything," that she was given an important part in another picture, "Ali Baba Goes to Town," even before audience reactions to her first performance had been gauged.

The picture in which these two coming stars make their bid for approval has Alice Faye, the Ritz Brothers and Don Ameche at the head of its cast. Its tuneful score was written by those veteran composers of musical hits, Mack Gordon and Harry Revel.

Six New Numbers In RKO Feature

Six tuneful musical numbers will feature RKO Radio's "The Life of the Party," in which Harriet Hilliard, Gene Raymond, Joe Penner, Victor Moore, Helen Broderick and Parkyakarkus have top roles.

Raymond and Miss Hilliard will sing together "Let's Have Another Cigarette" and "So You Won't Sing," and Miss Hilliard alone will present "Yankee Doodle Band" and "Roses in December."

Joe Penner will vocalize the title song, "The Life of the Party," while "Chirp a Little Ditty" will be sung by Jane Rhodes.

Selznick Realized $208,000 on 4 Films

By the Associated Press.

David O. Selznick told the Board of Tax Appeals yesterday his gross earnings from four pictures he produced for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer during 1934 were $208,000.

He listed "Dinner at Eight," "Dancing Lady," "Viva Villa" and "Manhattan Melodrama" as the pictures produced. Seeking a redetermination of an alleged $9,897 deficiency in 1934 income taxes, Selznick placed his net income for the year at $92,155.

His wife, Mrs. Irene Mayer Selznick, asked a redetermination of an alleged $3,223 deficiency in 1934 income taxes.

Shirt-Tail Effect In Sports Dresses

Have you seen the new "shirt tail" sports dresses?

Betty Furness has a clever one in gray wool crepe which she wears with Kelly green accessories.

The dress, a two-piece affair, consists of a tailored skirt and a man-type shirt.

Ginger Rogers Is New Girl Friend

The dream of a lifetime is being realized by William Corson, young player who less than a year ago made his debut in films.

Corson has just been selected to play Ginger Rogers' "heart interest" in the new feature, "Stage Door," in which Katharine Hepburn and Miss Rogers are co-starring. He will appear opposite the red-haired star in several sequences of the film.

"I'll be the envy of 10,000,000 masculine fans," said Corson when notified of his assignment.

Penguin Presented.

"Pete," the only trained penguin in the world, makes his film debut in RKO Radio's feature comedy, "The Big Shot," co-featuring Guy Kibbee, Cora Witherspoon, Gordon Jones and Dorothy Moore.

National Theater Announces Wider Availability Of Low Priced Seats for Its New Season of 1937-38

Second Balcony Season Reservations Are Abolished to Make All Price Ranges Procurable at Box-Office; Jesse Crawford Booked With New Type of Orchestra; Evelyn Brent Begins the Long Climb.

PROVISION for the increased comfort and greater good will of the theater-going public of Washington, at the National Theater next season, will extend beyond the mere installation of new seats throughout the house, redecorating, improved ventilation and the other physical improvements of the famous old property that have been going on—and still are going on—this summer.

BELL.

The National management last week took a definite and heroic step to overcome a heretofore incongruous and thoroughly inequitable condition by eliminating season reservations for the second balcony, thus making these lower-priced seat locations available to the general public on the day advance ticket sales open at the box office for the given attraction. To this end, the following bulletin was mailed to all patrons whose names appear on the theater's second balcony season reservation list:

"Due to the decreased capacity of the second balcony occasioned by the reseating of the National Theater, and the ever-increasing demand for season reservations in that section of the theater, the management has deemed it expedient to discontinue the practice of second balcony season reservations.

"Please be assured that this decision has not been made without mature consideration as to how to provide 'the greatest good for the greatest number' in point of service and this, we feel, can best be done by affording all local theater-goers an opportunity to secure the lower priced seats.

"In your instance, we have taken the liberty of adding your name to the mail order list—sample order form find herewith—by which medium you will be tendered the privilege of applying in advance of the box-office sale for reservations and, thus, for only such individual attractions as you may care to witness.

"These mail order requests will be filed and filled in the order of receipt and, insofar as is possible, specified locations will be allotted.

"The management is not unmindful of the loyal support you have given the National Theater in the past, but, confronted with applications in excess of the limited, and now curtailed, capacity of the second balcony, feel that the interests of the theater's patrons in the community at large will best be served by this departure from policy.

"Thanking you for your past patronage and soliciting it for the future, etc."

This, it seems to me, is a move on the part of Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National, that is heartily to be applauded. It removes a source of constant complaint and irritation on the part of the general public which never has been able to comprehend why no second balcony seats have been available at the box-office of the theater on the day of the Thursday opening of the box-office sale for the attraction to open the following Monday. Furthermore, with a second bacony capacity of approximately 300, it removes from the hands of a scant 2,500 people, out of a total population of some 500,000 or so, a virtual monopoly of the second balcony for all desirable attractions.

Probably in common with all of the other drama desks in the Capital, this department has been swamped with letters and distracted by constant telephone calls, from friends and strangers alike, petitioning the intercession of this column with a view to securing second balcony seats that were not there to be had when "big" productions have come to town.

Now when the Katharine Cornells, the Lunts, the John Gielguds, the "Follies," the "The Show Is Ons," the Jane Cowls, the Helen Hayes, the Maurice Evans and all the other ace offerings of any given season come to town, potential patrons all will have an equal chance at the box-office.

Then there is the matter of cancellations to be considered. This is an item that kept the box-office staff in a state of perpetual confusion and turmoil. That also will be eliminated under the new order of things, with the net result that the National will be able, henceforth, to render more efficient service over the telephone and at the box-office window than heretofore.

Nice going is what I always say.

It sometimes takes the motion picture potentates a long time to catch on. I have in mind particularly the case of Evelyn Brent, one of the conspicuously able feminine "menaces" in the old days of the silent films. Those who observed "The Last Train From Madrid" closely will recall that Miss Brent appeared momentarily as a "hard-boiled" member of a Spanish "female battalion," who was trying to comfort a younger and very much frightened girl marching at her side. From this "bit" and others like it, it has been borne in on the producers that Miss Brent has one of the best recording voices in Hollywood. Her opportunities, no doubt, will be a little more ample from now on. Her own view of her temporary eclipse is a philosophical one. "I'm not making what is termed a 'comeback,'' she says. "I dislike that word. I haven't been away. I've been here all the time, just fooling around and not making any particular attempt to get work. My mind is made up now and I am going to carve a new niche for myself in films. I'll play any kind of role offered, bad woman, good woman, young woman or old woman. I'm a bad girl in 'King of Gamblers,' and I enjoyed playing the character." "King of Gamblers" is an early booking at the Metropolitan.

• • • •

Within the past few years, practically every type of novelty orchestra has been heard on local stages as a headline attraction of the vaudeville portion of the bills offered by the "combination houses" playing both pictures and stage acts. At last, however, something new in the way of a stage band is to be heard on a Washington stage—or so it is said.

Jesse Crawford, best known as the "poet of the organ," recently has assembled an instrumental unit that is said to depart strikingly from conventional musical formulas and orchestrations, injecting a new note in modern rhythm. A featured member of the organization, of course, will be Mrs. Jesse Crawford, who has shared with her husband the distinction of being one of the modern masters of the multiple-manual theater pipe organ.

This new departure in instrumentation and musical treatment will be offered Washington theatergoers as chief feature of an elaborate stage bill at Loew's Capitol Theater beginning Friday, on which also will be included Guy Robertson, singing star of "The Great Waltz" and other popular operettas and musical comedies.

In the cast are Ann Garrett, Paul Messink, Ann Ives, George Farrington, Rita Lacombe, William Ritchie, Milton Freedman, Hugh M. Smythe, Richard Walsh and other favorite summer players.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, July 25.—Idol Chatter: Bonita Granville is the screen's worst meanie, but she is also the best-mannered youngster I know. A manicurist in a Beverly Hills hotel looks enough like Miram Hopkins to be her twin. Highest-priced team in history will be Fred Astaire and Carol Lombard; their combined salaries for one film will nick the studio for $450,000. Basil Rathbone visited an astrologer—and now he is driving with "unusual care" until October 1. Look-alikes: Rosalind Russell and former star Lila Lee.

MIRIAM HOPKINS.:

Come to think of it, I have never seen Clark Gable order the "Clark Gable Salad" featured by the M-G-M cafe. Height-of-something-or-other: A fan letter Mae West received the other day, requesting her footprint. The most popular girl on any set where Jeanette MacDonald works is Jeanette's French maid; strong men take one look at her and forget the war debt.

Ever since Edward Everett Horton read a book about "One Thousand Ways to Commit Sulicide," he has been a depressing companion. Ida Lupino's ancestors have been actors for 250 years—and she can prove it. Questions and answers department: No, a $20 bill is hardly enough if you want to take the girl friend to the Trocadero. You ought to see the chickens, ducks and such that Robert Taylor's fans have sent him since he bought that ranch! Luise Rainer likes any vegetable with meals—provided it is cabbage. Harpo Marx says all things in life are relative—and the guy who has none is lucky.

I never park my car in the super-service station directly opposite the entrance gates of M-G-M without enjoying a reminiscent chuckle. Four or five years ago, when Charles Bickford was under contract to Metro, he became involved in a feud with Louis B. Mayer. The big boss wanted him to play roles that he considered inane and Charley, red-headed and rebellious, walked out, blasting Mayer's name in language that would have appalled an army bull-whacker. As a result, Bickford's contract was broken, but he had his revenge. He bought this service station and erected a huge neon sign that spelled out his name in letters four feet high.

"There's one for Louis B!" he proclaimed to Hollywood. "From now on he can't leave his own studio without seeing 'Charles Bickford' in lights!"

Not long ago, an elderly couple who once were famous vaudeville stars came to Hollywood. In their hey-day they had been noted for their generosities to the down-and-outers of their profession, but, like most actors, they had failed to save. They arrived here destitute. Joe E. Brown heard of their plight and quietly enlisted the aid of 25 former vaudevillians. They bought a small house and furnished it completely—even to linen and silverware and food in the pantry. And last night they gave a surprise party there that reached its climax at midnight, when Joe made a speech and informed the oldsters that the house is theirs— a gift from friends who have not forgotten their many kindnesses in other days.

Sometimes, I'm proud to live in this topsy-turvy town.

Met Sigmund Rumann today and found him very woe-begone —a state that I could understand after he had told me, between sighs, the tragic story of Irma. Irma was—but is no more—Sigmund's pet goose, a really superior bird if only half of the anecdotes about her are true. It seems that the Rumanns hired a new cook the other day and — but what's the use of telling the rest of so doleful a tale? "Jimmie," Sigmund mourned, "I'll never forgive myself — and I'll never forget how poor Irma looked on that platter."

Little

"Fury," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production that may be said to embody the first of Spencer Tracy's unbroken succession of superlative performances in a diversified gallery of screen portraitures, is revived this week at the Little Theater as chief feature of the film bill.

In this starkly melodramatic subject, Tracy is cast as a young mechanic on his way to be married. En route to his betrothed, he is stopped in a small town where a kidnaping has occurred. Taken into custody, he is thrown into jail for the crime. Inflamed by a few addle-pated leaders, the townsfolk lash themselves into a frenzy and mob the jail, intent upon applying the barbarous law of mob rule and lynching. They set fire to the jail—oblivious to the fact that newsreel cameramen have been taking complete pictures of the outbreak—and leave the scene convinced that their victim has perished in the flames.

But Joe Wilson made his escape from that man-made holocaust and thereafter concealed his identity and his whereabouts.

Summoning his brothers, he arranges to have all of the ring-leaders shown in the pictures arrested and arraigned for murder. So long as he remains in concealment, there is every likelihood that all of these criminal citizens will meet the fate which they think they have imposed on him.

Softened by the pleas of his intended wife, however, and influenced by the haunting thought that if he carries out his scheme of revenge he will be guilty of the same crime, in manifold measure, of which he holds them guilty, he appears in court and the murder charge automatically collapses.

This is the story that is unfolded on the silver sheet, without a vestige of comedy relief and only occasional flashes of romance. It is wholly Tracy's picture, although the supporting members of the cast execute their tasks vigorously and well. The costellar role of the girl is played by Sylvia Sidney, who makes the most of a part that is distinctly secondary to her costar's.

Walter Abel, as the director attorney; Bruce Cabot, as one of the leaders of the mob; Edward Ellis, as the sheriff, who could not stem the tide of his townsmen's fury; Walter Brennen, Frank Albertson and George Walcott, as the two younger brothers; Jonathan Hale, as the defense attorney, and scores more contribute generously to the vivid realism and grim power of the story.

The bill is completed by the usual short subjects and a new issue of the newsreel.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: George Gershwin and David Freedman, the script writer, both died at the age of 38. They were intimate friends and lived in the same neighborhood . . . On the night the Pulitzer Prize Committee announced its award to "Of Thee I Sing," for which Gershwin had written the music, Freedman met the composer walking disconsolately along Amsterdam avenue. Gershwin explained that he was saddened by the fact that, in announcing the award, the committee had mentioned only Kaufman and Hart, and made no reference to the music . . . "Forget it," Freedman consoled. "After all—who remembers the author of 'Aida?'"

POLITICS: The newspapers featured a story from Hollywood announcing the candidacy of Edgar Bergen's dummy, Charlie McCarthy, for mayor . . . The story discussed McCarthy's excellent qualifications, and carried three photos of him, showing how easily he can be operated . . . As a matter of fact, Grover Whalen and Senator Copeland can plead foul. The dummy used in those photos was not Bergen's McCarthy. It was a dummy owned by Ventriloquist Walter Walters.

HELP WANTED: Max Reinhardt probably never will produce another play in New York. One of the difficulties he encountered in "The Eternal Road" was with the Stage Hands' Union, which demanded that no less than eight of its members be hired to operate a huge door dividing the lower and upper parts of the stage. Reinhardt agreed, and eight men were employed . . . After the opening performance Reinhardt returned to the theater and discovered his scenic assistant, Ostrander, repainting that door, sliding it back and forth—alone!

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: One of New York's bluebloods has evolved a strange way of maintaining himself in the station to which he no longer can afford to be accustomed. He conducts groups of his friends to the swank night clubs, and always takes the check. "Dutch treat, of course," he tells these friends, who thereupon deliver to him their share of the check. The youngster accepts this money, then signs his name on the check, indicating that it's to be charged to his account —which he never pays.

PERSONALS: The newspapers front-paged the rift between Art Jarrett and his wife, Eleanor Holm Jarrett. The reports attributed the rift to a large diamond ring, which Mrs. Jarrett allegedly had received last week . . . The truth is that she bought the ring on December 25, 1935, when both played an engagement at the Book-Cadillac Hotel in Detroit. It caused an upheaval in the Jarrett family at that time, because Art insisted that her purchase was a reflection upon the less-expensive Christmas gift he gave her.

TRAVEL AND RESORT DEPARTMENT: Mrs. Edith Ogden, whose name is known in literary circles, is head lady at the Fieldstone House, in Monroe, N. Y. The neighboring resorts display signs stating that they cater only to "a selected clientele," a none-too-subtle inference of discrimination. That's why Mrs. Ogden has had a new sign ordered: "Our clientele is not only Selected, but Chosen as well."

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Christian L. Ebsen, father of Vilma and Buddy Ebsen, operates a dancing school in Orlando, Fla. He taught his children how to dance, watched them become featured Broadway entertainers, and was proud when Buddy climbed to stardom in "Broadway Melody" . . . The senior Ebsen is in New York now attending the Dancing Teachers' Business Convention. And at the convention he's taking a full course in Advanced Dancing.

BEAUTY DEPARTMENT: At 3 a. m. Bob Hope invited two friends to his home for a snack. He rummaged through the refrigerator and found a bowl of grated potatoes. "They are for potato compresses," Mrs. Hope warned, "good for sun-strained eyes" . . . She wouldn't let them touch the milk—which was to be used for face lotions. The eggs were broken and the yolk set aside for egg facials. Even the ice cubes were being used for a final, cooling touch . . . "Well," Hope proposed, "let's all go out to a beauty parlor for supper."

Minskys Elude Edict by Going Suddenly Arty

New York, July 25 (U.P.).—The brothers Minsky—Herbert K. and Morton—breathlessly announced to a waiting world tonight that they will dedicate their theater, once the home of the strip tease, to the "art of self expression."

Closed since May 1 when License Commissioner Paul Moss revoked 14 burlesque theaters' licenses, the Oriental will reopen tomorrow with an all-colored show featuring truckin' instead of the strip tease, and mammy songs instead of double entendre ditties. The other emporiums are presenting a de-stripteased form of entertainment, with white performers.

And as an added feature, perhaps to impress Commissioner Moss that they believe that panties are here to stay—on the performers—the Minskys will open an art exhibit of the works of Negro painters. No nudes are good news, Herb and Morton figure. So their patrons will view nothing but still lifes and landscapes.

"We feel that the public seeks 100 per cent 'solid' entertainment," said Morton, the small slight bald half of the Minskys. "And you know, as well as I, that colored entertainers are 'solid.'"

"Their talents are natural. They have a peculiar type of singing and dancing that together with the proper atmosphere and costumes, which we provide, makes their talent saleable.

"We'll keep it in its sphere. We'll not go high brow. "This."—Morton waved his arm vaguely around his office—"will be a theater of self expression!"

"We are attempting to pioneer a new type of entertainment and it is entirely our own brainchild," he said proudly. "You see, burlesque showmanship is applicable to other forms of presentation.

The first show under the Minsky's new policy will be "Doin' the Uptown Downtown," with Erskine Hawkins and his swing band. Each week a new show, featuring a "name," band will be on tap.

The theater opens tomorrow morning with a matinee preview that runs from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. Then at 9 p. m. will come the "gala premiere." Searchlights and spot lights will be focused on the theater where once the name Minsky stood in letters 3 feet high.

They're gone now because Commissioner Moss ruled that the name Minsky could not be used in connection with the enterprise but as Morton so aptly put it "we can't use our name but we're here in personality."

Author Denies 'Trends' Exist In the Theater

Playwright Kaufman Will End 'Trend,' However, With a New One!

New York, July 25.

GEORGE F. KAUFMAN, coauthor with Moss Hart, of "You Can't Take It With You," the goofy Pulitzer prize-winning comedy now current in New York and Chicago, doesn't believe in "trends" or "cycles," so far as the theater is concerned, and has been saying so right out loud.

There has been considerable talk recently that because of the great success this season of such comedies as "You Can't Take It With You," "Yes, My Darling Daughter," and "Tovarich" that a trend is under way and that theatergoers are demanding that they be permitted to "get away from it all" and find an escape from reality in laughter. Mr. Kaufman, frankly, doesn't believe in any such thing.

"I'm doubtful about trends," he said. "I always have been. A play of a certain type is fortunate enough to become established as a hit and to get talked about. Another play of a similar type is produced and that gets over. Writers immediately begin to write learnedly about a 'trend,' about some mysterious something or other, some inner urge that has taken over the national consciousness. A better play may pop up the next week with a completely reversed viewpoint, it may attract the same sort of attention, and lo, a new 'trend' is established. The idea is largely moonshine.

"In other words there aren't any 'trends' and there aren't any 'cycles.' Oh, I know that because I have happened to get away from satire in 'You Can't Take It With You' and because I helped write a thoroughly good-natured play that there is an opinion abroad in the land that its success is due to that very fact, that the great American public has turned its back on satire.

"I'm afraid that Moss and I will have to end one of these 'trends' in our next effort—the trend of opinion which describes us both as having permanently abandoned satire and the attempt to devastate pomp, circumstance and stupidity."

The "next effort" that Mr. Kaufman referred to is, of course, the musical comedy in which George M. Cohan is to have the principal role. It is to be presented at the Music Box Theater, New York, in October and it is whispered that it will be a satire on the American political scene. It will not be programmed as that, however, as Mr. Kaufman has a definite prejudice against billing anything as "satire." He isn't adverse to writing it, but he doesn't want it labeled as such.

"Satire," he once said in an epigrammatic moment, "is something that closes on Saturday night."

Cooper's 291 Ties Smith And Laffoon

Trio Splits 3 Prizes; Paul Runyan Earns Fifth Place.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 25.—Squire Gene Sarazen, the farmer-golfer from Brookfield Center, Conn., brought to a golden climax another great comeback drive today by conquering a brilliant field in the $10,000 Chicago Open tournament with a 72-hole total of 290 strokes.

One of professional golfdom's finest and most colorful shot-makers, Sarazen, until today at the Medinah Country Club, had been without a major triumph since his famous "double eagle" helped him to a tie and playoff victory in the 1935 masters' tournament at Augusta, Ga., in 1935.

Although he wobbled a trifle in the home stretch today, his shots were still good enough to withstand sizzling challenges for the $3,000 capital prize by three Chicago professionals, "Light Horse" Harry Cooper, slender Horton Smith and Ky Laffoon, who followed him abreast a single stroke back.

75 for Final Round.

Sarazen went into the final round of today's 36-hole assignment with a one stroke lead and playing a good share of it in the rain, fashioned a 37-28—75. Smith and Laffoon a stroke back as the final drive down the season's biggest golfing money-trail, were able only to match the little Italian. Smith checked in with a 37-38—75, and Laffoon, finishing in spectacular fashion with a pair of birdies, had 39-36—75.

For Cooper the tournament was another sorrowful affair. He never had lost an official competition out of three over Medinah's tough acreage and he had gone into the event a 6-to-1 choice to keep his record intact.

Back of Smith, Laffoon and Cooper, who split up second, third and fourth money total of $2,900—$967 apiece—came Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., who put together the hottest round of the tournament, a dazzling 33-36—69 on his last effort, for a final 292. Jim Foulis, another of Chicago's professional line-up, took the next position with 294.

Snead Scores 296.

Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., sensation of the winter money events and runner-up to Ralph Guldahl for the National Open crown, followed with 296. Guldahl landed in a deadlock with Jimmy Hines, of Garden City, Lond Island, and Bill Heinlein, young Indianapolis professional.

At 300 even, came Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa.; Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, boss of the world's amateurs before turning professional a little more than a year ago, and Johnny Bulla, of Chicago.

War Horsemen Win, Advance In Tourney

Department Polo Four Eliminates Penllyn Riders at Baltimore, 12-6.

Baltimore, Md., July 25.—The hard riding War Department polo team advanced yesterday at Stevenson in the Southeastern Intercircuit Tournament by defeating the Penllyn Club, of Philadelphia, 12 to 6.

The club four, which started the match with an advantage of 2 goals in the handicap rating, were unable to keep pace with a better balanced Army riders.

Maj. Ernest Harmon, playing at No. 1 for the War Department four, scored six of the goals made by his team. He was aided by some fine passing from Capt. C. H. Reed.

Maj. Harmon quickly wiped out the 2 goals his team spotted the Philadelphia outfit and put the War Department out in front before the close of the first chukker. Four goals were made in the intitial period and Maj. Harmon accounted for all of them.

Chambers scored a goal in the second chukker for Penllyn and Strawbridge added one in the third. The Philadelphians were then blanked until the final chukker when Ingersoll scored twice.

Line-up and summaries:

| War Dept. | Position. | Penllynn. |
|---|---|---|
| Harman | No. 1 | Strawbridge |
| Reed | No. 2 | Ingersoll |
| McClure | No. 3 | Bringer |
| Boye | No. 4 | Chambers |

Score by chukkers:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| War Department | 4 | 1 | 0 | 3 | 2 2—12 |
| Penllynn (handicap of 2) | 0 | 1 | 1 | 0 | 0 2—6 |

Referees—Joseph Reilly and Bob Bullock.

Cabmen Win.

American Netmen Defeat British

Newport, R. I., July 25 (AP).—The Harvard-Yale tennis team today defeated England's Oxford-Cambridge net stars, 11 to 10, to bring to a close a three-day, international intercollegiate tournament.

The Prentice Cup, awarded annually to the winner of the tournament, will remain in America for the sixth time as a result of the Harvard-Yale victory.

Wins Auto Crown.

Newark, N. J., July 25 (AP).—Buster Logan, 1936 Olympic bikeman and senior Alpine wheelman, captured the national senior dirt track championship today in a 1-mile runoff at Weequahic Park.

Bees Wallop Pirate Hurlers, Win Twice

McKechnie's Crew Comes From Behind to Capture Second; Guy Bush Allows Bucs Only 5 Hits in Opening Contest.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 25.—Sweeping to seven straight victories over first division clubs, the Boston Bees today took a double-header from the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Five-hit pitching by Guy Bush carried the home club to a 5-2 win in the opener, while two costly errors by the ailing Arky Vaughan enabled the Bees to come from behind and capture the nightcap, 7 to 5.

In a mad rush for a first division berth, the Bees have won 22 of their last 30 games. After taking four straight from the Cards, they bagged all in the three-game series with the Pirates.

Exploding the myth that they are the "hitless wonders," the McKechniemen landed on Cy Blanton, ace Buc's righthander, for eight hits in four innings to pile up a big early lead in the first game while the veteran Bush was hurling airtight ball, allowing but three hits in eight innings.

Two walks and two hits brought the Pirate runs in the ninth.

Lou Fette, the Bees' 30-year-old freshman ace, registered his thirteenth victory of the season in the second game although he had to call on Frank Gabler for help in the seventh.

Boston came from behind twice to win. Four runs in the sixth on one hit decided the game. Vaughan, handicapped by an injured leg, made two errors in this frame.

Grove Tames Indians, 4 to 1, In Short Game

Cronin's Misplay Starts Lone Run for Tribe; Rain Halts Play.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 25.—Lefty Grove, veteran Boston southpaw, subdued the Cleveland Indians, 4 to 1, today in a game that rain halted in the fifth inning.

The second game of the scheduled double-header also was washed out. Grove retired 13 batters in a row before Manager Joe Cronin fumbled Julius Solters' grounder in the fifth. Bruce Campbell and Sammy Hale followed with singles to produce the lone Indian tally.

Ben Chapman clouted a home run in the first inning for the Red Sox, and Eric McNair hit into the left-field seats after Pinky Higgins walked in the second for two more Boston runs. Jimmy Foxx clouted the ball 435 feet in the fourth for a triple and tallied on Higgins' long fly.

Cox-MacKenzie, Barnett-Shorey Duos Win in Professional Matches

J. Nesbitt's 269 Is Tops At Kenwood

D. E. Mattison's 75 Wins at Beaver Dam, Brown-Brownell Win.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Wiffy Cox, the wise-cracking Kenwood pro, yielded only a stroke to par yesterday at Columbia, starring in the third renewal of the professional double exhibitions by posting a 71 and pairing with Roland MacKenzie to trounce George Diffenbaugh and Freddie McLeod, 5 and 3. A final hole par four by Bob Barnett enabled him and Mel Shorey to win over Al Treder and Al Jamison 1 up in the other encounter.

Cox, aided by a pair of deuces on the first nine, was out in 34 with short hole putts of 45 and 15 feet dropping on the fourth and eighth holes. The eventual winners were 1 up at the turn but were given little competition on the second nine. They scored a best ball of 67, MacKenzie helping Wiffy on four holes, mainly because of his ponderous tee shots that featured the day's play. McLeod didn't figure in a singe hole of the four-ball match.

Trailing Cox in the individual sweepstakes was his partner with 38-35, 73; Diffenbaugh with a pair of 37s for a 73, and Treder and Barnett with 76 each. Mel Shorey hit the 80 mark and Jamison was a stroke behind. The host mentor reported no card.

Barnett won the last hole of each nine with pars to give his team the margin of victory. A seven on the par four tenth soared his score three strokes over par. A crowd of 300 links fans witnessed the matches, which will be continue in two weeks at Indian Spring. The P. G. A. championship at Old Point Comfort forces the open date next week.

J. W. Nesbitt's net total of 269 won the Japanese Ambassador's trophy at Kenwood over the 72-hole medal play route, with handicaps. The new champion posted successive rounds of 85, 87, 88 and 89 and subtracted a 20 handicap from each round.

John Bergelin trailed by seven strokes, shooting four rounds of 77 and under, 71, 75, and two final 77s. His handicap was 6 from each round for a net total of 276, two strokes ahead of J. M. Lowe, whose 18 handicap was deducted from scores of 79, 94, and two finishing 89s.

D. E. Mattison, playing the first nine in 35 strokes, one under par, and returning in 40 from a 75, won the Grosner Cup at Beaver Dam yesterday with his three over par score. A five handicap enabled him to pace the Class A handicap division with a net 70.

A. J. Wertis, G. D. Murrell and L. W. Dorset were winners in the other flights. Scores:

First flight—D. E. Mattison, 73-5—70; Roger Sherliff, 80-3—72; E. J. Carver, 83-10—73.

Second flight—A. J. Wertis, 79-12—67; J. P. Strong, 81-12—69; R. K. Thompson, 84-13—71; Dr. L. L. Levine, 83-12—71.

Third flight—G. D. Murrell, 85-19—66; F. J. Moore, 85-16—69; J. F. Childs, 87-16—71.

Fourth flight—L. W. Dorset, 92-22—70; W. A. Ray, 95-24—71; R. M. Weiffberg, 94-23—71.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. McCreery won the mixed two ball event at Manor yesterday, shooting an 84 with a 20 handicap for a net 64. The contestants played selective drives and alternate shots.

Mrs. A. L. Simcoe and Maj. McLain were three strokes behind, with 85-18, 67, followed by Mrs. R. D. Hutchison and John McBride, 85-15, 70; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lacey, 90-20, 70, and Mrs. H. A. Neff and E. F. Heimer, 86-16, 70, in a three-way tie.

The gross prize went to District Amateur Champion Bobby Borwnell and his partner, Marion Brown, who continued their monopoly in mixed ball events by posting a 79, fashioned from a 38 on the woods nine and 41 on the open course.

Pat Cook stood on the seventeenth tee at the Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday, needing par in for a 69 and the lowest score of his career, but he finished, 6-5, for a 71, one over perfect figures.

Charles Dare and J. T. Shuptrine tied for first prize in the blind bogey event at Belle Haven, with 84s. Sam Harman, with a net 62, won the special draw prize. Play in the Alexandrian's senior event will start after the pairings are announced on Wednesday.

Johnny Holzberg joined Buddy Sharkey in the Tribal Bowl semi-finals at Indian Spring by defeating last year's runner-up, Alex Baumgartner, 4 and 2. Jack Robinson defeated T. T. Smith, 3 and 2, and E. Wagner won over Jack Phelan, 2 and 1, in other matches.

The Acushnet demonstrator that visited several of the local courses started the day at the Four Corners course and the driving machine carried two balls over the tenth green, some 430 yards. The brassie machine lifted one 420 yards.

Tigers Beat Macks, 12-9, In the Mud

Rain Limits Contest to 6 Innings; 5 Homers, Among 24 Hits.

Detroit, July 25 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers, proving better "mudders" than the Philadelphia Athletics, defeated the A's, 12 to 9, today in a rainy game called in the sixth inning after Detroit scored two runs on wild pitches.

The game, first of a scheduled doubleheader, was held up 52 minutes after 1 2-3 innings, but was resumed in the rain and called because of mud. The second game was postponed.

Russell Peters knocked a homer with a runner on base to tie the score, 9-all, in the sixth, but Gerald Walker singled and scored Charley Gehringer with the winning run in the Tigers' half.

Arch 'Scarlett' McDonald Shows the Girls The Latest in 'Gone With the Wind' Outfits

Broadcaster Pays 'Bet' When Nats Triumph in St. Louis.

ARCH "GOLDILOCKS" McDONALD.

Arch McDonald, whose dulcet voice is heard on the radio every afternoon broadcasting baseball for The Post-General Mills (WJSV), paid off a bet yesterday afternoon by wearing what he called a "Gone With the Wind" dress during his regular seance with the box-score ether

Arch, or "Scarlett," as he will now be known, was getting fairly disgusted with the local club's long losing streak last Wednesday, and made the chance remark over the air that he would wear a "Gone With the Wind" dress if the Nats won.

Out of spite or something, the Nats won, 7 to 3, over Chicago, and Arch made good on his strange proposal yesterday, before a tittering audience of about 100 feminine radio fans at Station WJSV.

Mrs. Ethel Smarr, of 2801 Twenty-third road, North Arlington, was the dressmaker who perpetrated the exquisite little gown in which Mr. McDonald paid off. She said she "had no idea" he would wear the dress, which is a nifty flowered cretonne number that might better have been made into an awning.

"I called him up and got his measurements" she explained yesterday. "His bust is 41, waist 42, hips 47, and skirt 32. The dress took 6 yards of cloth."

A 47-hips dress is rather hard to sew on an ordinary machine, she said. That is well over a yard around. The shoulders she didn't think fitted as nicely as she would have liked. The yoke gathers with a string, like a potato sack.

Scarlett McDonald received numerous telegraphic offers yesterday to appear at country fairs, a fireman's benefit, etc., some of the offers being signed "Love and kisses," but he declined, saying he was going into the movies as a siren.

The dress, of brightly hued orange, red and green flowers, he warned was copyrighted. He said that any Parisian coutourier who pirated the design would do so at his peril. It was becomingly set off with a pink sash, and a corsage of dead peonies. Its short sleeves showed Scarlett McDonald's hairy arms and fancy tattooing to advantage.

City League Is Featuring Close Races

Leads in Each Section Shared by Several Nines.

By Jack Munhall.

The National City League races were considerably tightened as a result of yesterday's games.

In the A unlimited, Rose, Heurich and Gordon are deadlocked for the lead; in the B unlimited, New Deal, Georgetown and Read share first place; in the junior league George's and Police 5 are tied at the top with five wins, no losses and one tie, while Police 4 is close at their heels with five victories and one defeat, and in the midget league George Decudes and Corr lead with two victories against no losses.

In the feature unlimited A game yesterday Walter Murphy, big right-handed ace, hurled Rose to a 4-0 victory over Dixie Pigs in which he allowed but five hits and not a man reached third. Charley Booker, pitching for the losers, scattered 13 hits, while fanning a like number. Tommy Nolan, K. Nau and Jack Cullins were the leading hitters for the winners.

At the same time Gordon with Wes Snow in his pitching debut outslugged Anacostia Motors, 11-7, in a loosely played contest. Snow his own wildness and weak support, gave seven hits but was hurt by

In the other A game Klein's Tavern stayed in second place, defeating Union Printers, 4-1, as Manager Bill Liggett doled seven hits.

In the B section New Deal, winners of the first half, captured its second consecutive victory of this half and its eighth in both halves beating Joe Tucci Plumbers, 12-9, by dint of a seven-run rally in the eighth inning. Herbie DeVers, after his eighth consecutive pitching victory, was driven from the mound and Anderson, who did a great relief stretch, was credited with the victory.

Read capitalized on a brilliant three-hit flinging by Ernie Boggs and Roche and bested 260th Coast Artillery, 5-1. Roche was the winning pitcher.

H. E. Leary defeated the Cardinals, 9-8; Star Radio swamped Ross, 16-3, and Georgetown took the measure of White Haven, 6-1.

Among the juniors, George's Radio barely escaped its first defeat, coming up with a run in the last frame to tie Petworth, 5-5, in a seven-inning contest. J. C. Flood was very impressive, combining a murderous batting attack with seven-hit twirling by Lou West to submerge Wade Auto, 19-0, and Police Boys Club No. 5 captured its fifth straight, blasting Stewart by 9-3 as Carver subjected the losers to four hits and fanned ten, and Police No. 4 moved along, routing Browdy's, 16-1.

Hugh Lynch-Bill Breese Win Middle Atlantic Doubles Championship

This Morning

Sports Notes Red Hot From St. Louis

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, Mo., July 25.—Rogers Hornsby was on the skids as manager of the Browns as early as June 12, when the Nats made their second trip to St. Louis . . . on that date. Bucky Harris queried Hornsby about some St. Louis players who appeared on the club's waiver list and not until then did Hornsby know that President Barnes, of the Browns, had asked waivers on some of his players . . . Hornsby, in some disgust, told Harris that "They're not consulting me any more about how to run the team . . . the front office is handling all the arrangements . . . they don't want a manager, they want a stooge."

POVICH.

A half-dozen Washington players were taken slightly ill this morning after glancing at the sports page headlines which related Flying Scot's victory in the $30,000 Arlington Classic at Chicago on Saturday . . . the sinking sensation in the region of their stomachs was induced not only by Flying Scot's victory but by the $17.20 mutuel the horse paid . . . because when the Nats were in Chicago, Jockey Johnny Gilbert, a guest at the same hotel told them he was riding Flying Scot against Pompoon and that he couldn't miss winning the race . . . the boys laid off the horse when he was quoted at only 2 to 1 in the morning odds.

• • • •

The Detroit Tigers had an added incentive to win the pennant at the start of the season . . . Owner Walter O. Briggs, who operates the team as a hobby, not for profit, told his players he would give 'em a bonus amounting to 25 per cent of their year's salary if they won the championship . . . If the Tigers finish in second place they will get a kick-back of 10 per cent of their yearly wage . . . the entire arrangement is strictly against the rules, which prohibit a club owner from offering added inducements to his players . . . in justice to the poorer clubs in the league.

• • • •

Manager Bucky Harris dispatched Coach Nick Altrock to Kansas City and Sioux City to scout a pair of outfielders and a pair of pitchers today . . . and then Harris remarked, "That's a tough job, that scouting . . . why, if I were a scout looking over some of those minor league clubs and I saw some of these Washington players performing for Sioux City like they've been playing for me, I wouldn't give 'em a second look . . . take Johnny Stone during the past couple of weeks. Now, he's a genuine big-leaguer, but if I were scouting him at Sioux City and saw him play like he's been playing during his slump, I'd have to pass him up . . ."

• • • •

During the past three days at Chicago the White Sox and Yankees played to 10,000 more fans than the St. Louis Browns have drawn to Sportsmans Park in all their home games of the 1937 season . . . Washington, despite its poor position in the race, is far ahead of any season since 1933 in home attendance . . . but Detroit is still regarded as the best baseball town in the American League . . . and New York, in proportion to its population, is the poorest.

• • • •

Bill Terry rules the Giants with such an iron hand that his ball players dare not lend their names to indorsements until they receive his permission . . . he refused to permit Shortstop Dick Bartell to indorse a shaving soap for $500, telling Bartell to hold out for $1,000 from the firm . . . consequently Ducky Medwick, of the Cardinals, got the $500 handout from the shaving soap people . . . but Terry took generous care of his old pal, Travis Jackson, by appointing him manager of the Giants' Jersey City farm . . . he gave Jackson a $12,000 managerial salary, higher pay than any other minor league manager in the country.

• • • •

The relative esteem in which the Browns and Cardinals are held in St. Louis is illustrated by the amounts paid the two clubs for the broadcasting rights for their home games . . . A St. Louis station has bought the privileges, paying the Cardinals $15,000 for the season and the Browns only $7,500 . . . Clark Griffith received $20,000 for the broadcasting rights to the Nats' road games this season after having given away the privileges for three years . . . in Chicago, the radio stations pay Onwer P. K. Wrigley, of the Cubs, $75,000 for the broadcasting rights.

• • • •

Bucky Harris has it all figured out that the Nats will be a serious pennant factor next season . . . he is basing his hopes on the introduction of the deader ball, with its raised stitches and thicker cover . . . "It will help our kind of a team," said Harris. "We don't have the power of those other clubs who can knock the ball out of the lot . . . Guys who can rap out those singles and doubles . . . that kind of fellows will get the same kind of hits with that deader ball, but those other teams won't be able to hit those long flies out of the park . . . We've been practicing with that 1938 ball, and it's going to ruin a lot of those clubs who have been used to getting those extra base hits."

Washington Greys Win.

Baltimore, Md., July 25.—The Washington Greys, of the National Colored Baseball League, trounced the Homestead Greys of Pittsburg in the first game of a double-header at Oriole Park by a score of 8 to 4. The Homesteads were leading 6 to 3 in the second game, which was called in the third inning.

Beat Junior Aces, Four Sets Decide

Harry Heffner, Davie Johnsen Bow, 2-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4.

By Bob Garrison.

Hugh Lynch and Bill Breese, a couple of graduate collegians, became the Middle Atlantic doubles champions yesterday after they had used their academic training, as well as their tennis experience, to advantage in defeating Washington's Junior sensations, Harry Heffner and Davie Johnsen, in a well-played four-set match at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Heffner, 18, and Johnsen, just turned 17 Saturday, Middle Atlantic and District Junior doubles champions, bowed to the veterans of local tournament play, after winning the first set, 2—6, 6—2, 6—2, 6—4.

Obviously playing under tension and to some extent with an inferiority complex, the two youths' games completely collapsed in the second and third sets as they began to err at crucial points. Breese, left-handed Harvard graduate, and Lynch, former Princeton performer, failed to display any great superiority over Heffner and Johnsen as far as tennis was concerned, but, rather, cashed in on their mental capacity and poise.

Had Johnsen's net game and cross-court smashes rung with Saturday's accuracy and certainty, when he and Heffner eliminated Ritzenberg and March in the semifinal round, however, it might have been a different story, experience and attitude notwithstanding.

Brilliant In Spots.

Neither Breese or Lynch gave the gallery reason to applaud at any time in the match, while Johnsen and Heffner flashed beautiful tennis at spots, especially the retrieving game of Heffner, whose power of anticipation was superseded only by his agility.

Breese and Lynch, methodical and confident, forced Heffner and Johnsen into errors at every turn. Johnsen, aiming for cross-court placements from mid-court, was strong on many shots, overdriving the side line, and Heffner was often victim of Breese's strategy of smashing Heffner's bullet serve back at him with equal speed as he raced to the net. Harry mishandled many of them and netted often.

After losing the first game at love to Lynch's service, winning on Heffner's serve, and then dropping the third game to Breese's service at love, also, the youngsters ran out the set, breaking through Lynch and then Breese.

Heffner-Johnsen Off.

After that, when Lynch and Breese, probably appearing as big as Breese is tall, began to work on the open spots, forcing their opponents to err or miss entirely, it was evident that Heffner and Johnsen's smooth first set co-ordination was a little off, and by the last set they were banging into the net and over the base line frequently, in their frenzy.

A 5-to-1 lead in games was quickly garnered by the winners in the second set before Breese lost his service as Johnsen and Heffner each banged a placement down the middle to take the seventh game. The next game in that set and the first four of the next set went to Lynch and Breeze, as they began to convert lob returns into placements by overhead kills.

Wind Up Pronto.

Lynch's serve, however, was broken by Davie and his energetic partner, who promptly served a love game to make it, 4 to 2, Lynch-Breese. But Breese held on his serve as Johnsen dropped his service at love to end the set.

Following the intermission, Breese and his dapper partner returned to the court ready to wind up the match pronto, and grabbed the first two games. Davie and Harry retaliated by taking the next two as Johnsen held service after they had passed Breese's.

After games were tied at 2-all, services were held in turn until the tenth game, when the score was 5—4, Lynch-Breese. With Heffner serving, he and Davie lost four straight points when his services were banged back at them as they moved forward. Davie drove outside for the loss of the first point and Heffner netted twice on low forehand tries. The match point was also a net ball off Johnsen's backhand.

The pitching mainstay is CHARLEY WOCH, of W. & L. and formerly a member of Drum Corps of Alexandria . . . his battery and school mate is EARL SOPER . . . three W. & L. undergrads and one Eastern High boy fill the infield . . . ROBERT BULLEN, the Lincoln Park representative, is at third base and JOHNNY FOX is at first, SPENSER PROCTOR at second and VINCENT (brother of the manager) completes the regular inner defense at short stop . . . ROBERT BASSE, another W. & L. lad alternates at first with FOX . . .

Each of the outfielders are now attending the Ballston School . . . JOHNNY MAYR covers leftfield, LEO FOX, right and PAT SWEENEY center. . . .

S'funny . . . CARL MILLS, an outstanding football player at Gonzaga and then Eastern attended and played football last season at Mount St. Mary's in Emmitsburgh . . . where real teams are rare but not on a scholarship . . . he is worknig his way through . . . PHIL FOX, former athlete at Wilson Teachers College and a well-known soft baller, has received a scholarship to Columbia University in New York and will assist in coaching the teams . . . at present Fox is a playground director . . . not stationed anywhere in particular but commutes between them all . . . BROTHER SAM, Central High football and basketball player, succeeded PHIL this year as director of JOHNSON-POWELL . . .

Bernizer A. C. on Top.

The Bernizer A. C. made it two straight over Orange City Beer yesterday on the Beermen field, winning 7-3. Marshall and Pernillia hit homers for the winners.

Members of Winning and Losing Doubles Teams

Pictured in fast action shots, Hugh Lynch, left, and Harry Heffner, right, who clashed in the Middle Atlantic doubles final round yesterday at the Army-Navy Country Club. Lynch, teamed with Bill Breese, defeated Heffner and his partner, Davie Johnson, in four sets, 2—6, 6—2, 6—2, 6—4. Heffner and Johnson are holders of the Junior Middle Atlantic doubles championship and came within yesterday's match of adding the senior sectional laurels to their record.

Dodgers Take Opener, 6 to 5; Second Called

First Game Goes 11 Innings; Nightcap Ends in 12 Frame, 7-7 Tie.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, July 25.—The Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals played to a 7-all tie in 12 innings in the nightcap of their double-header today, after the Dodgers had won the opening game, 6-5, in 11 innings. The second game was called because of darkness.

$4,000 Stake To Inaugurate Race Season

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—Another racing season opens at rebuilt Saratoga tomorrow with 15 promising 2-year-olds named for the $4,000 Flash Stakes and 10 fine sprinters selected to match strides in the $2,000 American Legion Handicap.

The two feature events are the first of the 37 rich and coveted stakes which will be run before the closing of the 30-day session, August 28. Only the absence of War Admiral prevents the historic track from presenting all of the turf titans. Samuel Riddle's 3-year-old champion is on the grounds but is not due to start as he has not fully recovered from injuries suffered while winning the Belmont Stakes.

Phillies Split With Reds in Pair of Games

Win Nightcap, 7 to 3, After Losing Opening Battle by 13-to-3 Count.

Philadelphia, July 25 (AP).—Wayne Lamaster held the Reds to six hits in the second game of a twin bill today while his teammates walloped four Cincinnati pitchers for 11 safeties, the Phils winning easily, 7 to 3, after losing the first game, 13 to 3. Norris, Davis and Camilli hit homers in the second game.

AUNT HET

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Preserving Entries.

One of the great players of this country, Sydney Rusinow, once remarked to me "I think that the greatest fault of weak players is their inability to resist the temptation of a short suit. When my hand is the dummy and my partner begins the play by ruffing with my trumps, I shudder. I feel sure that my dummy is being abused." I am often inclined to agree with Mr. Rusinow in calling that the greatest weakness of average players. The hand given below is a striking example of how such temptations must be avoided.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♡ | 1 ♠ | 2 ♣ | 3 ♠ |
| 3 N T | Pass | 4 ♣ | Pass |
| 4 ♡ | Pass | 5 ♡ | Pass |
| 6 ♡ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

South's bid of three notrump is note-worthy since it showed a better-than-minimum hand while at the same time warning North of duplication of values. The strong club suit induced North to make a further try for a slam, which South accepted.

West opened the Queen of spades, and declarer had to resist the temptation to ruff. Instead, he discarded a low diamond from dummy. East won with the Ace of spades and returned a diamond, South winning with the Ace.

South now drew three rounds of trumps and took the high clubs, discarding one losing diamond. A low club was then ruffed and dummy was entered with a spade ruff. The thirteenth club furnished a discard for the Jack of diamonds, and now South's cards were all high.

South realized at the beginning that one ruff in dummy would not yield him enough tricks; two ruffs would leave him without an entry to the established clubs.

2 Sought in Feud In Arizona Canyon

Mammoth, Ariz., July 25 (AP).—Three sheriff's deputies searched on horseback through rugged Aravaipa Canyon today for Joe Towner and Bill Wheeler, charged with assault with intent to murder in what officers termed a revival of the "Haunted Corral Feud." The fugitives are accused of firing at Joe Flieger, rancher, and A. B. (Doc) Deaver, cattle inspector, Thursday.

W. W. Cochran, chief deputy sheriff, said he is convinced the assault on Flieger and Deaver was in retaliation for the slaying of Henry Towner, whose body was found in "Haunted Corral" on Flieger's ranch, six weeks ago. Flieger is free on bond, charged with killing Henry Towner, Joe's brother. The deputy said he believed Henry Towner had been slain as a result of a long standing dispute over range rights.

Steel Market Stabilized by Price Schedule

Operating Rate Cut 1 Point During Week to 81% of Capacity.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 25.—Announcement of prices for fourth quarter delivery on principal rolled steel products by a leading producer at the level prevailing for third quarter has met the expectations of market observers and will steady the market by eliminating tendency toward overbuying or speculation, says Steel.

The statement by Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation that prices would be continued includes bars and small shapes, structural shapes, plates, tin plate and other tin mill products, strip, sheets, sheet piling, standard light rails and accessories, car and locomotive axles, solid wrought steel wheels and semi-finished products. Galvanized sheets, tubular goods and pig iron are not included. American Steel & Wire Co., has reaffirmed prices on wire and wire products for fourth quarter.

Sheet deliveries, which have been extended further than in other products, are being bettered as backlogs are reduced in face of lighter buying. However, considerable delay is still encountered, hot-rolled being obtainable in about 16 weeks, hot-rolled annealed in about 18, galvanized in 18 to 19 and cold-rolled in 10 to 11 weeks. Some automotive buying for 1938 models is being felt.

Closing of the National Tube Co. plant at Lorain, Ohio, for vacation cut the operating rate in the Cleveland district sharply and the Pittsburgh area also receded 5 points. These were offset in part of increased activity in Eastern Pennsylvania, New England and the Wheeling district. The national rate was lowered 1 point by these changes, to 81 per cent of capacity. Eastern Pennsylvania rose 2 points to 70 per cent, Wheeling 1 point to 92 and New England 12 points to 90. Cleveland dropped 28 points to 51 per cent, Pittsburgh 5 points to 83 and Detroit 2 points to 95. There was no change at Chicago at 84 per cent, Youngstown at 78, Buffalo at 88, Birmingham at 96 and Cincinnati and St. Louis at 93 each.

Largely due to practical shutdown by Ford Motor Co., automobile production last week dropped to 86,055 cars. General Motors held its rate with 50,040 and Chrysler with 26,550, while Ford made only 655. All others made a total of 10,810, compared with 12,585 the previous week.

June Stock Sales 13.4% Under May

The Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that the dollar value of sales on all registered securities exchanges during the first six months of 1937 exceeded the same period of 1936 by 5.6 per cent. The total value of trading in the first half of this year was $14,383,537,217 against $13,615,236,506 in the first half of 1936. Stock sales increased 8.2 per cent from $11,696,119,146 to $12,655,495,001 from the first six months of 1937, while the number of shares traded decreased 3 percent, from 511,308,444 to 495,822,414.

The market value of bonds decreased 10 per cent from $1,919,005,207 to $1,727,791,856, while the principal amount of bonds decreased 14.2 per cent from $2,427,514,421 to $2,082,171,540.

The dollar value of sales on all registered securities exchanges in June amounted to $1,168,508,010, a decrease of 20.7 per cent from the value of sales in May and a decrease of 19.3 per cent from the value of sales in June, 1936. Stock sales had a value of $993,772,109, a decrease of 21.6 per cent from the May figure. Bond sales were valued at $174,731,721, a decrease of 15.4 per cent from May.

Total sales of stock in June were 38,098,699 shares, or 13.4 per cent under May's total. Total principal amount of bonds sold was $210,858,845, a decrease of 11.5 per cent from May. The two leading New York Exchanges acocunted for 95.6 per cent of the value of all sales on registered exchanges, 94.9 per cent of stock sales and 99.8 per cent of bond sales.

Trading on the Washington Stock Exchange for June totaled $192,095, comprising $142,612 in stocks and $49,483 in bonds. Total May transactions were $145,514, made up $95,325 in stocks and $50,189 in bonds.

Abitibi Power Plans To Raise $14,000,000

Toronto, July 25.—The reorganization plan for Abitibi Power & Paper Co., Limited, sponsored by the bondholders' representative committee, of which Joseph P. Ripley is chairman, and approved by the preferred stockholders' protective committee, of which Lieut. Col. Herbert Molson, C. M. G., M. C., is chairman, is made public today by Mr. Ripley following the issuance of an order by the Supreme Court of Ontario calling a meeting of first mortgage bondholders for October 15 to consider the sale of the company's properties under the terms of the plan.

The plan, designed to end a five-year receivership for the company, which is one of the largest newsprint manufacturing enterprises in Canada, provides for recapitalization through the formation of a new company to acquire the properties, and provision of $14,000,000 of new money for working capital and for rehabilitation and improvement of properties.

Kroger Grocery Stores.

New York, July 25 (AP).—Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. sales for the four weeks ended July 17 totaled $18,667,600 against $18,728,603. Company operates a chain store system in Ohio and other Midwestern States.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Confidence Grows With Court Bill Defeat; Farm Prosperity Promises Uplift.

New York, July 25.—With the vacation season in full swing, it requires world-shaking events to stir up much enthusiasm in securities markets. The week had its usual portion of war alarms and political maneuvering, but beyond a settlement for the moment of what looked to be serious trouble between China and Japan, and the collapse of the scheme for packing the Supreme Court, nothing extraordinary took place.

From the Government section on down the bond market was able to advance in moderate trading. It was assured of a prolongation of the easy money period, in spite of a reduction on the week of $90,000,000 in excess reserves, and of lack of outlet for investment funds in satisfactory securities. Although with the defeat of the court bill Congress probably will adjourn shortly, and thus end the threat of fresh spending ventures, the Treasury nevertheless is reporting an advancing deficit that is traveling at a much faster pace than was the case last year. New borrowings are less numerous, outside the weekly discount bill tenders, and this week the Treasury used some of its gold for payment of its ordinary bills.

Using Gold.

The Treasury reports showed that the loans or trades of gold to China and Japan, plus perhaps the operations in the foreign exchange markets, are beginning to take effect. A fairly large reduction, the first in a year and a half, took place in the monetary gold stock. However, the decline was forced by the Treasury; it did not mean a withdrawal of foreign capital from this market, and the prospect of enough reduction in the gold stock to affect credit is slight. The current loss, in fact, is coming from the sterilized gold, and is free of money market influence.

In commodities as well as in stocks confidence is further hardening, on this side and in the London market. The outstanding fact is that demand is good for the basic commodities. With the effort to increase armaments demand for steel, iron and other war materials scarcely will diminish for a long time. Steel scrap prices are hardening. In other countries if not yet on this side, peace industries are having to compete with rearmament for some raw materials.

On this side too the agricultural situation, after several years of low crops or low prices, or both, is decidedly favorable. Not only are the largest crops in several years promised in wheat, corn, and other important feed and cash harvests, but prices also are high and tending to rise. Some of the bill will have to be paid by the American consumer, but he has been gaining for two or three years with a wage scale rising faster than his living costs. Rural prosperity will do much this autumn and winter to stimulate business generally.

Profits Rising.

Trade and commerce now seem to be holding steady and even improving a little, after a month or so of seasonal decline. The steel industry is reported to be close to another upturn, notwithstanding the fact that motor companies are now taking inventory and preparing for new models and that the railroads are in an equipment buying doldrum. Just now it can be said that business is not so good as it was, but it still is better than it was a year ago.

Corporation reports for second quarter look remarkably well, in consideration of the widespread strikes and rising production costs. Nearly a hundred corporations that so far have reported reveal an increase of about 29 per cent over profits in the same period of last year. The rate of improvement in nearly every direction, except building construction, is declining, but momentum is sufficient to give reasonable assurance of higher profits and larger dividends than were turned in last year.

Dividends in June 30% Over Year Ago

THE PARKER CORP. GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS INCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, Mass., July 25.—Although cash dividends declared in June declined seasonally from May, they were 30 per cent greater than those declared in June a year ago. Declarations in the first six months of this year surpassed the first half of 1936 by 21 per cent and were slightly under those declared in the first half of 1929.

600 Will Attend Church Drama Sessions Here

Second Conference of Catholic Group to Open Aug. 7.

More than 600 delegates of the Catholic Theater Conference will attend their second meeting August 7 and 8 at the Catholic University here.

The session, arranged at an initial conference in June at Chicago for the purpose of organizing a general movement to advance dramatic activities in Catholic schools, will hear the Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of the philosophy of religion at Catholic University, give the the keynote address.

The Rev. J. J. McLarney, of River Forest, Ill., a former graduate of Georgetown University, is chairman of the convention committee and is assisted by Dr. James S. Ruby, jr., vice chairman. Executive and general committee meetings will be held the opening day of the conference, followed by a session in the Blackfriar Theater, at Catholic University.

The second day of the conference will open with a solemn mass, at which the Rev. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, will give a sermon. Officers will be elected at the afternoon session.

Navajo Tribe Split Over Collier Ideas

Farmington, N. Mex., July 25 (AP). The Navajo nation had the first political parties in its long history tonight as the result of dissension over Indian Bureau policies. Insurgent tribesmen met three days and adopted the name "Navajo Progressive League."

J. C. Morgan, Navajo lay missionary and leader of the faction demanding ouster of Indian Commissioner John Collier, declared the organization was concerned with Indian affairs only and not national politics despite its action in indorsing policies of Senator Dennis Chavez, New Mexico, who has fought Collier.

A tribal council in Window Rock, Ariz., and an all-Pueblo meeting in Santo Domingo, N. Mex., recently upheld Collier and criticized Chavez.

France Wants to Run Its Fair Next Year, Too

Paris, July 25 (U.P.).—Premier Camille Chautemps tonight asked Thomas Watson, chairman of the United States delegation to the Paris World's Fair, to learn whether the United States would consent to extend the exposition one year.

Under an international agreement, one year must elapse between expositions. The New York fair opens in 1939; hence there should be none in 1938. But French exposition buildings still are unfinished and officials want to prolong it.

JOE PALOOKA — The Press. — By Ham Fisher

Special to The Washington Post.
Asbury Park, July 26.
As the fight day approaches one notes an undercurrent of tension around the camp. Although this is to be ordinarily expected at a time like this, the tension here seems greater than usual. Everyone is at a high pitch except Palooka himself. Knobby Walsh bites at the spar hands and seems about to explode ----
WONDER WHAT THOSE COPS ARE DOING AROUND HERE?
I'VE BEEN WONDERING TOO. SOMETHING'S IN THE WIND.
RAY SAYS THEY'RE THINKING OF CUTTING OUT PUBLIC SPARRING SESSIONS ALTOGETHER.
KNOBBY HAD SOME TROUBLE WITH THAT SPARRING PARTNER NAMED SLUGGY.
THERE'S ENOUGH GUYS AROUND HERE. THEY WOULDN'T NEED COPS FOR THAT. I THINK I'LL PUT WALSH UNDER THE THIRD DEGREE.
HE'S HOLDING SOMETHING OUT, C'MON

APPLE MARY AND DENNIE — By Martha Orr

GOOD-NIGHT, GRAN'MA. IS BILL REALLY GONNA MARRY THE WIDOW DIGGS RIGHT HERE IN OUR HOUSE ON WEDNESDAY?
SO IT SEEMS, DENNIE..
WE CAN'T LET HIM DO THAT. WE DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT HER! MAYBE SHE'S JUST MARRYING HIM FOR HIS MONEY.
EXACTLY.
GEE, WE GOTTA KEEP HIM FROM DOING THIS. I'LL FIND OUT WHO SHE IS, AND WHERE SHE'S FROM. IT WON'T BE HARD TO TRACE HER.
PROBABLY NOT, BUT WHAT COULD YOU POSSIBLY FIND OUT THAT WOULD STOP THE WEDDING.
CAN'T TELL 'TIL I LOOK, BUT IT'S WORTH TRYING.

Brother Philip, Educator, Dies At Ammendale

Member of Normal Institute Collapses as He Plans Trip.

Brother Philip, noted Catholic educator, whose family name was John Eagan, died unexpectedly Friday at Normal Institute, Ammendale, Md., it was announced yesterday. A member of the Brothers of the Christian schools, he was 63.

For three years he had been connected with the institute as director of St. La Salle Auxiliary, an association devoted to raising funds for educating young men preparing to become Christian Brothers.

Born July 6, 1874, in Minooka, Pa., a coal-mining town, Brother Philip entered the mines after only three years of primary school education. He studied with his priest and later attended evening sessions at St. Thomas College, Scranton, Pa.

In 1894 he went to Normal Institute preparatory to becoming a Christian brother. He was then assigned as teacher in parish schools in Philadelphia, Pa.

He received an M. A. degree in education at the Catholic University of America in 1912. Two years later he was appointed superior of La Salle Institute, Cumberland, Md., following which he became director of the Philadelphia Catholic Protectory Association.

In 1917 Brother Philip was recalled to St. Thomas College as president. His other achievements in the field of education include the opening of the first Catholic high school in the District of Los Angeles, for which purpose he was loaned to California by the Baltimore Province. He was also principal of Central High School, Pittsburgh, Pa., and from 1920 to 1932 taught at St. John's University here.

He was a member of the executive board of the National Catholic Association. Duquesne University conferred on him an LL.D. degree.

He is survived by two brothers, Joseph Eagan, of Archibald, Pa., and Frank Eagan, of Minooka; and by five sisters, the Misses Mary, Margaret and Susan Eagan and Mrs. Martin Lowry, of Minooka, and Mrs. William Brady, of Dunmore, Pa.

He was about to leave for Scranton, Pa., where one of his sisters is ill, when he collapsed and died.

A solemn requiem mass will be celebrated this morning in the Ammendale Chapel. Burial will be in the private cemetery of the Christian Brothers in Ammendale.

Bandit Dies After Battle With Kansas Policemen

Kansas City, Kans., July 25 (U.P.).—Dale Thomas, 26-year-old bandit, who was wounded in a gun fight with two policemen last night in which another bandit was killed, died today in Providence Hospital. Before he died, police said, Thomas confessed that he and the man killed by patrolmen had committed several robberies here.

The man shot to death by Patrolman John Coyle was George Squires. Patrolman Norbert Jones was shot six times, but was given a good chance to recover. The battle started when the patrolmen found Thomas and Squires attempting to steal their patrol car.

C. I. O. Leader Urges Union to Aid Mooney

San Francisco, July 25 (AP).—Harry Bridges, Pacific Coast C. I. O. chief, and International Longshoremen's Association leader, told 5,000 persons at a mass meeting today that the C. I. O. offers the logical machinery to bring about the freedom of Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings.

Mooney and Billings were convicted of the 1916 San Francisco preparedness day bombing, which killed ten persons. Labor groups have long claimed the two men were convicted on perjured testimony. Bridges spoke at a meeting called as part of a Nation-wide anniversary of 21 years of protest of the imprisonment of the two men.

Convict Faces Grilling.

Binghamton, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—Charles Harrigan, one-eyed Alcatraz Prison convict, who testified he wrote six ransom notes and was on the scene of the 1933 kidnaping of John J. O'Connell, jr., will be the object of searching cross-examination when trial of eight men for the crime resumes tomorrow.

Wood Petrol Up at Parley.

Paris, July 25 (U.P.).—Utilization of timber for production of wood gas as a motor fuel to replace gasoline will be discussed at the third International World Congress on Timber Utilization, opening tomorrow.

Old Square Dance And 'Swing' Mixed Equal 'Apple Step'

Columbia, S. C., July 25 (AP).—Now it's the "Big Apple" on Dixie dance floors.

From the mountains to the seacoast nimble-footed Southerners are "appling." The dance is a combination of the old-fashioned square dance and the modern "swing."

From 4 to 20 persons gather in a circle on the floor as the music begins in medium fast tempo. Then they go through a series of fancy wiggles and rhythm steps to the call of a leader. Individuals and couples step to the circle's center and "shine."

The steps are a hodge-podge of the almost-forgotten Charleston, drags, swing steps and Harlem's "truckin" toned down now and then with the formal dignity of the Virginia Reel.

University of South Carolina students got the idea for the dance from the gallery of a colored night club here when they watched the dusky dancers circle in finger-snapping abandon to the rhythm of a nickelodian.

Convict Dies, Two Hurt in Prison Riot

Montgomery, Ala., July 2 (U.P.).—Roland Patterson, 35, of Birmingham, died today as Kilby Prison authorities opened an investigation of a riot in which two other men were stabbed.

Jack Bradley, 21, New York, and Henry Rogers, 25, were treated in the prison hospital for knife wounds. They were sent back to their cells tonight, however, and prison officials said their condition was not serious.

The riot developed last night when several convicts "ganged" the three men. Warden Frank Boswell said they were leaders of a group of "sackers"—prison racketeers preying on other convicts.

The "sacking," Boswell said, consists of throwing a sheet over the head of a prisoner and robbing him while he is unable to identify the assailants. The attack on the three was a signal for a general riot.

5 in Family Killed In Train-Car Crash

Lima, Ohio, July 25 (AP).—Five persons were killed tonight when a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train struck their automobile at a crossing in Dola, 25 miles east of here.

The dead are Cloyce Getz, 30, farmer; his 28-year-old wife and their three daughters, the oldest about 7.

Loren Benjamin, of Dola, who witnessed the accident at the unprotected crossing, said the train struck the rear of the car Getz was driving, hurling all the occupants from the machine, which burst into flames.

Striker Is Given Four Years In Covington Mill Rioting

Second C. I. O. Member Will Go on Trial Today; 16 Indicted After Clash in Which Six Persons Were Injured.

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Va., July 25.—Ray Beatty, secretary of Local 2214, Synthetic Yarn Federation, a C. I. O. affiliate, will go on trial tomorrow in Alleghany County Circuit Court as the second of 16 union members charged with assault and battery while a member of a mob.

The indictments grew out of a disorder July 7 at the plant of the Industrial Rayon Corporation when workers attempted to return to the strike-closed plant. Six persons were injured and two automobiles overturned.

A Highland County jury, hearing the case under change of venire order, last night convicted Glenn Perkins, first of the indicted men to go to trial, and fixed his punishment at four years in the penitentiary.

W. A. Sargeant, engineer at the plant, testified he saw Perkins strike C. B. Nida with an 18-inch stick. Perkins said he did not participate in the melee and the defense sought to show he went to the plant to see if the majority of employes were returning to work and if so, to join them.

A defense motion to set aside the verdict as contrary to the law and evidence was denied by Judge Benjamin Haden. The judge agreed, however, to Perkins' release for 70 days under bond of $3,000, which also covered breach of the peace.

Perkins remained today in the county jail, but said he was informed by Arthur T. McNulty, of New York, associate general counsel for the textile workers' organizing committee, that the $3,000 bond probably would be furnished tomorrow.

Perkins said his counsel told him they would push proceedings for an appeal to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

The convicted man said today that "this is the first time in my life I've ever been in jail. I do not feel downcast or unhappy, because I feel that everything is being done by my counsel.

"I do not feel that I got a fair trial," he continued. "Although I'm the only one who knows, I have this satisfaction: I am innocent and I've been sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. If my appeal fails, I shall serve it as an innocent man."

Perkins said he had not anticipated such a verdict and that he felt the witnesses and evidence in the case were not sufficient to convict him.

The defense, after the State rested its case, moved to strike out certain evidence on the ground that Perkins was indicted under the State mob statute which the defense held was applicable only when the prosecution showed a preconceived intent against a specific individual. Judge Haden overruled the motion.

Two Buildings At Alexandria Nearly Finished

Murphy and Apartment Structures Soon to Be Ready for Occupancy.

Finishing touches now are being put on the new Murphy Building, fronting on both King and Washington streets, by the contractor, and a new 5 and 10 cent store will be opened there August 6. The Warfield Apartments, King and Alfred streets, are rapidly being completed and will be ready for occupancy shortly.

A. R. Lash, building inspector, through the office of H. G. McCartney, city engineer, reported a slight decrease in building permits during the last two weeks, but permits for new construction amount to $35,010, and for repairs and alterations, $5,700, or a total of $40,710, have been issued.

Conditions of employment in all mechanical trades have been better recently than for many months, and dealers in building materials of all kinds report much activity.

Statistics recently compiled by the office of the superintendent of schools show that during the session of 1936-37 there was a total enrollment in the schools of the city of 5,456 children. Of this number 4,452 were white and 1,004 colored. There were 1,537 high school students, 1,413 white and 124 colored.

There was an average daily attendance during the year of 5,098.4 children, the percentage of attendance being better for white than for colored children, being 94 per cent attendance for whites and 91 per cent for colored. There were 180 days actually devoted to teaching.

The average annual salary for elementary teachers, white, was $1,143.02; colored, $804.76, the general average being $1,076.63. Average salaries of high school teachers was, white, $1,257.05; colored, $900, or a general average of $1,202.72. The general average of all teachers, elementary and high school, was $1,121.08.

Cosby May Get Post On Coal Commission

Officials of the National Bituminous Coal Commission said yesterday D. M. Cosby, of Abingdon, Va., is being considered for appointment on the commission's legal staff.

They said Cosby's duties and the location of his office if he is appointed have not been determined.

A definite decision, they said, will be reached before August 1.
